

Install Flix once and you're ready to manage story development for all your projects.

Artists focus on story development imagery in tools like Photoshop. Simple "one click" buttons send images to Flix, which handles mundane file management tasks

Flix is the central hub where everyone can review and comment on your project. Notes are tracked directly to the story panels, ensuring artists know what needs attention.

Production departments can review story development directly in Flix and provide their feedback. Flix becomes the source of ground truth during production turnovers.

Flix delivers the sequence to editorial, with boards ordered and timed along with an email notification. Changes in editorial can be published back to the story team: everyone stays in sync.

Remote artists work with Flix just as if they were at the studio. All their files are saved in Flix so anyone can access them at any time.