A history of growth

It all started in the 1930s in Romagna with the poultry and livestock business, and from there it has grown into one of the largest agro-food companies in Italy. Amadori's is a story of continuous growth, built upon a family's dedication and guided by careful management always closely attuned to changes in the market.

Amadori today

- Over 1.3 billion euros of turnover
- 6 hatcheries
- 4 feed production facilities
- 6 food processing facilities
- 21 branches and agencies
- 3 platforms
- over 1,100,000 m2 of its own rearing facilities
- over 7,200 employees

With solid roots and an eye to the future, today Amadori is one of the Italy's largest agro-food companies, with a reputation for quality, safety and transparency.a.

A full circle: the integrated supply chain

When every step of the production cycle is checked first hand, you've done your homework.

This is why we directly manage our entire integrated supply chain: this is the only way to guarantee the origin of all raw materials and to control each step of the production cycle, also thanks to our internal traceability system. From feed production facilities to rearing facilities, from hatcheries to food processing plants, on up to distribution, we certify the quality of our processes and products in order to provide the market with quality, safety and good taste.

What makes Amadori different? It all starts here.

The innovations we offer on the market are able to combine Italian tradition with consumers' latest requests, to offer solutions that meet the new demands of taste and service.

This is why we have chosen to enhance our product offering with a series of nutritional and product pluses, simple ideas that can really make the difference.

Use of protected iodized salt

Ideal for iodine deficiency and the prevention of related problems.

Gluten-free products*

Good for everyone, perfect for those with celiac disease.

* many of which are licensees of the logo Spiga Barrata.

100% Italian poultry meat

A fundamental value that enables Amadori to offer uncompromised high quality, guaranteed products.

New formats

Such as individual portions, to meet the needs of each single consumer.

New materials

Like aluminium, to ensure more practical and easier use.

Campese: free-range chicken

Campese, chicken raised out in the open, is a product with a unique taste that recalls the flavours of long ago, typical of our rural traditions. Selected from the best races and fed exclusively with a GMO-free and vegetable diet, Campese chickens grow up free in wide open spaces with extensive vegetation from dawn to dusk, totally in tune with the natural rhythms of day and night.

They thus develop a more delineated and solid musculature resulting in tasty, quality, 100% Italian meat. The Campese rearing facilities are all located in the Puglia region, a particularly favourable area due to its temperate climate and rural countryside, in accordance with CE Reg. n. 543/2008 that regulates free-range rearing facilities.

The 10+ line: ensured quality

Quality is the value that guides all of our choices. This is why we have developed the 10+ line, to respond to the exact process and supply-chain requirements, in order to guarantee standards of excellence. The 10+ chicken and turkey line ensures a series of pluses regulated by a standard approved by the Ministry (Ministerial Decree of July 29, 2004) including:

- GMO-free feed,
- absence of flours and fats of animal origin,
- certification of 100% Italian meat (animals that are born, raised and processed in Italy),
- complete traceability of the integrated production cycle, from raising to processing, up to delivery to the customer,
- animal well-being.

The company also cares about proper use of energy in the production process.

From the customer's point of view

When customers are satisfied, the company grows healthy and strong over time. For this reason, our customers' needs have always been the focus of our business. From largescale organized retail to traditional retail, to Horeca, to wholesale, to export, we operate in the various sales channels which all have very different needs in terms of types of products as well as services and logistics. Through listening, cooperation, flexibility, diversification and timeliness, we work to establish true business partnerships.

We have developed an extensive product range, with unique specialities that have virtually no competition such as Campese free-range, as well as products and packaging that meets the needs of today's consumers, with careful attention to price but also to quality, service and product variety for diverse opportunities for consumption.

On a commercial, industrial and logistical level, we have structured ourselves in order to deliver our products to the greatest number of points of sale in the shortest amount of time and under the best conditions, thus ensuring even same-day delivery. That is the only way to safeguard the goodness and freshness of products with a very short shelf-life, making sure that the consumer appreciates these features and will buy our products again in the future, recognising Amadori as the best specialist in the poultry sector in Italy.

A commitment that has always rewarded us gaining respect from our partners and developing commercial relationships growing over the years, encouraging us to maintain, and improve, our operating standards.

Care is the hub around which our world revolves

We are very aware that our business has an impact on the world around us. We have therefore chosen a business model that can reconcile the company's goals with local social and environmental objectives, with an eye to quality and transparency. Respects and balance are the key words in the theme of corporate responsibility, which involves the entire production cycle and makes us committed in particular to people, animals and the environment.

People

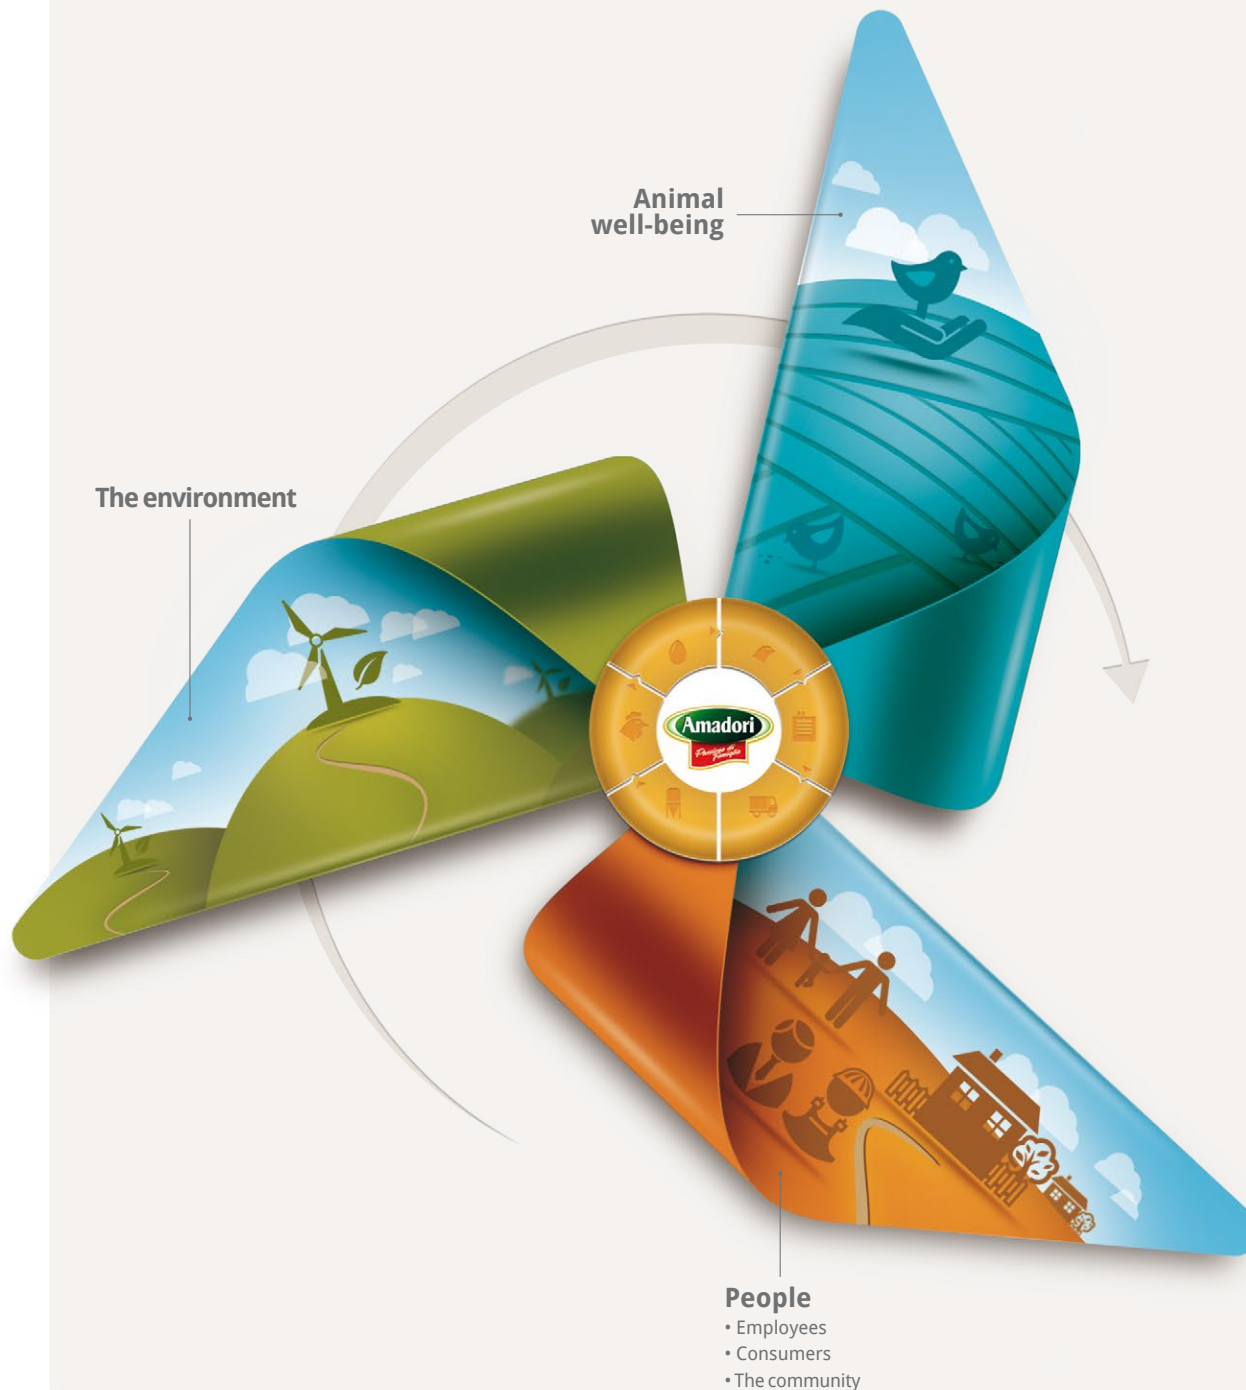

People are our strength. People who work with us, people who choose us, people who surround us. This is why we take great care in nurturing relationships with all our interlocutors: employees, consumers and the community.

The environment

Growing in harmony with our surroundings and limiting environmental impacts: with this goal we are constantly trying to improve the efficiency of our business activities, investing in new technologies to cut back consumption and optimize resources.

Animal well-being

Our link to the land and the farmers is the value that has always distinguished our company; it is also the factor which allows us today to guarantee the best conditions for animal well-being. In our supply chain the animals are cared for by expert personnel in order to constantly ensure the best conditions of animal well-being at every stage.

Mister MEAT

Amadori also supplies red meat. We sell a full range of fresh, vacuum-packed meat selected by type, origin and cut. The assortment includes products from the most prized meat-producing nations (Italy, Ireland, Argentina, Scotland, Denmark, Austria, Germany and Poland). Much care and dedication goes into the choice of meats, which Amadori then follows every step of the way, making sure it is packaged in the place of slaughter or in specialist food processing plants.

Boneless shank / rump

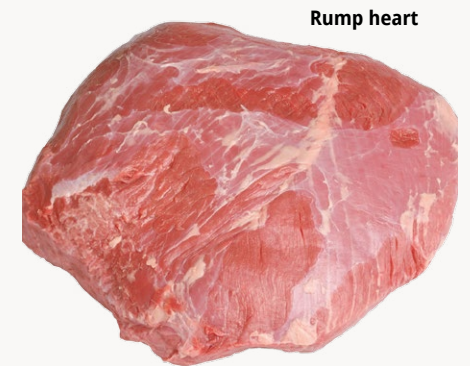

The rump heart is the section continuing off the loin. It is one of the more noble leg cuts.

It is used for:

- Pot roasts, stews, roast beef :
- Grilled steak
- Oven roasts.

An inexperienced chef with a good imagination could come up with a million things to do with a rump.

Knuckle / Topside

Its bony anatomical base is the entire length of the thigh bone and the distal end of the kneecap.

It is a prime cut and can be cooked in a variety of ways, either boiled or braised, in pot roasts and stewed “cacciatora” style. It provides excellent steaks and cutlets.

The primary cooking method is as a casserole with plenty liquid, preferably wine or beer.

Knuckle

This cut fully occupies the inner thigh area and is almost triangular and/or round in shape.

In terms of prize cuts, it rates with the rump: this makes it ideal for a wide range of uses.

The topside can be used for a classic steak or cutlet.

It is also perfect for breaded cutlets and all types of oven cooking.

This cut occupies the hind section of the leg.
To locate it, slice into the space between the muscles between the topside and silverside.
It is a prize cut which is ideal for cutlets and roast beef in particular.
An untrained or inexperienced eye may mistake a well-served portion for a fillet steak.

Eye of round

This cut occupies the lateral or posterior region of the leg.
This cut is rectangular in shape and is assessed in terms of the height, species and age of the animal; it is not a gristly cut (like muscles) but it is not very tender.
Cross cuts are used for cutlets, steaks, roast beef, pot roasts, stews and roasts.

Back shank / heel / loin

In anatomical terms, this is the part of the animal that produces movement.

This muscle is normally boiled due to the very thin layer of connective bone between one muscle and another (also called "osso buco") which makes this cut especially tasty.

The shank can be boiled, stewed, used in pot roasts or braised: cooking in this way is very economical, as adding mashed potatoes or polenta to the sauce significantly increases the portion sizes or numbers.

36631	Beef hind muscle, vac pack	France	1	3,500	4	14,00	30

This is from the hind quarter of the animal, near the leg.

It is made up of a group of muscles and is highly regarded in culinary terms.

To locate it, find the Achilles tendon and separate the muscle mass that partly surrounds the posterior section of the shin bone.

This cut can be cut in a specific way into steaks.

It is very good when cooked in liquid: stews, pot roasts, braised and all types of casserole.

It is also a good cut to prepare by boiling.

This cut can be easily recognized in its natural form.

The traditional "Florentine" is a beefsteak with an inverted T-shaped bone that must always include the tenderloin steak.

This steak is normally thick, not beaten and cooked on cooling open coals. The meat should only be salted after blood has started to ripple from the meat; turned once and not cooked in sauce.

If the bone has been removed, then the meat can be cooked in any sauce.

Beef Rib / Boneless loin or Strip Loin

Carvery rib or Beef Rib

This cut can be easily recognized in its natural form.

When the vertebrae and ribs (6/8) are present, the cut is called Beef Rib.

This steak is normally thick, not beaten and cooked on cooling open coals. The meat should only be salted after blood has started to ripple from the meat; turned once and not cooked in sauce.

If the bone has been removed, then the meat can be cooked in any sauce.

Boneless loin, 8 ribs

This steak is normally thick, not beaten and cooked on cooling open coals. The meat should only be salted after blood has started to ripple from the meat; turned once and not cooked in sauce.

If the bone has been removed, then the meat can be cooked in any sauce.

Entrecote o cube roll / Filetto

Cube roll

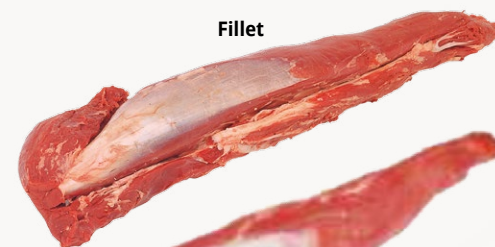

Entrecote

This meat is traditionally grilled, not beaten and cooked on embers slow resting. The Entrecote should only be salted after blood has started to ripple from the meat and turned only once.

This meat comes from the high lumbosacral region: the posterior part lies next to the rump, the middle and front parts lie below the vertebrae of the lower back and spine.

It is one of the most popular cuts and therefore the most expensive.

In Italy, the request for fillet steak outweighs the actual quantity that can be produced; an average steer or heifer gives no more than two fillets, equalling 5/6 kg of beef.

Generally, this cut is almost parallelepiped in shape.

It is located between the end of the loin and the connection to the head (occipital).

It includes the neck or chuck roll.

The meat is extremely tasty and in Italian, is called the "chef's choice": it is prepared by boiling or in pot roasts, or minced for use in a tasty meat sauce.

Boneless steaks can be cut from the chuck roll, to be grilled or baked in foil.

Corte Antica

The quality and flavours of Corte Antica cured meats come from Italy's age-old tradition of making good food, which spans from the careful selection of the meats to the full control and certification of farms. The ingredients are those used in traditional delicatessens, the recipes the same as those passed down through rural culture, and likewise the care taken in each step of the production process. This has produced a variety of mouth-watering foods, all guaranteed by Amadori's experience.
