

AN INTERNAL MEMO FROM THE NATIONAL SPARKS DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF HUMANS' RESOURCES

Urban Birding

Hey friends,

You live in a city and you can't get out to the woods this Monday? Don't fret. You can do some amazing bird watching right in your disgusting metropolis. Here's a helpful guide for what you can expect to see.

Pigeons

Ah, the city peacock. Pigeons gets their name from the word "Pig" and "eons", is what I assume. These birds are the most prominent type of bird you will find in your city. In terms of acceptance, they sit right in between rats and squirrels.

Sparrows

These little birds are everywhere but no one really notices or cares about them. I was Urban Birding and a sparrow flew right into a Chipotle bowl a man was eating. The man didn't flinch. He continued eating as the sparrow helped herself to the rice. It was only when the bird started eating the guac that the man swatted the bird away. That's extra.

European Starlings

I'm a bird expert and even I had to look these up. I always forget what they look like. They're not as hot as cardinals and they're not deep as crows. They're somewhere in between. Even a finch has more flare.

In summary,

Just go to a zoo.
