

Evaluation scores of the aNewSpring MiniMOOC on Online Social Learning

Short and sharp MOOC on Social Learning with relevant experts sharing their thoughts. Great start or recap about how to deal with (online) Social Learning.

Petra Peeters, University lecturer L&D and senior advisor (NL)

89%

of participants indicated that they met the ambitions and expectations that they set when starting the MiniMOOC

"This mini-MOOC from aNewSpring was a great experience and fully met my expectations."

Simon Wallis, Head of People & Development at Newtyn Consultancy and Training Limited (UK)

4 out of 5

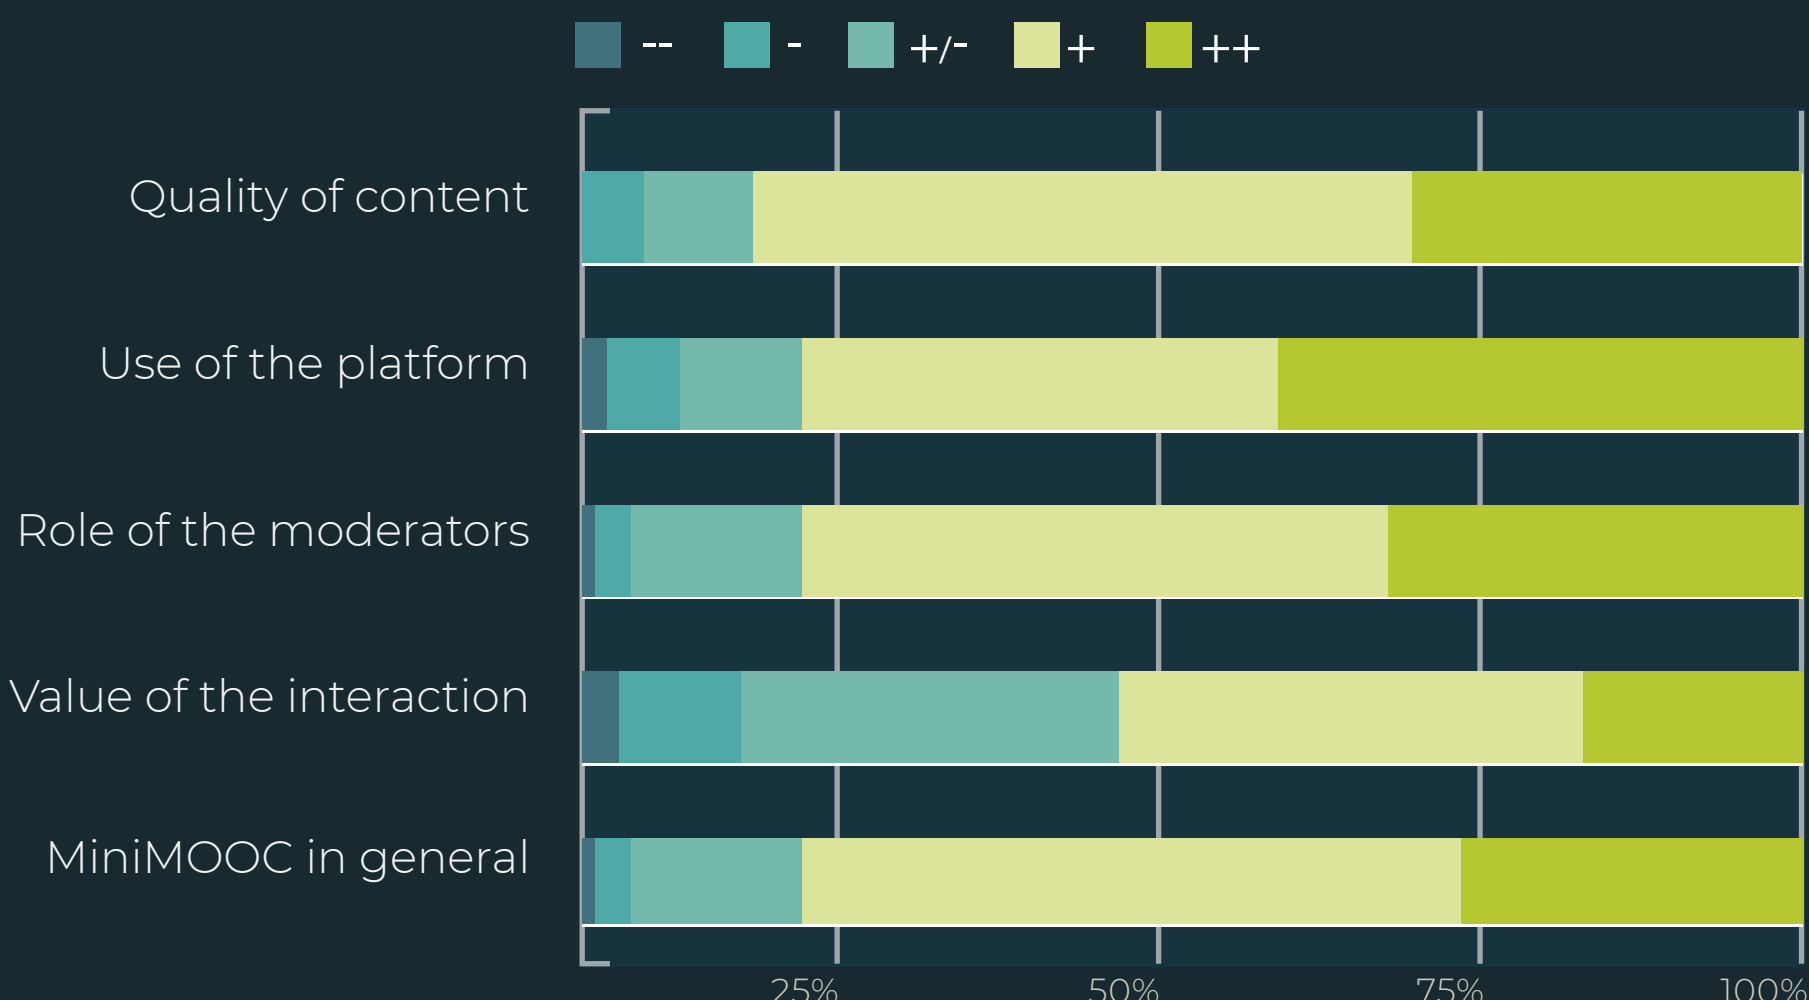

rating for the MiniMOOC in general.

Quality of content, use of the platform and role of the moderators was scored at 4,1.

Value of the interactions at 3,6 out of 5.

"A challenging course which made me think and review my own practises. Very beneficial."

Bob Price, L&D Business partner at United Welsh Housing (UK)

You moderators rocked. You made every comment feel valued. Just keep it up! Loved the interactions. Made new friends.

Christee Atwood, ATD author, speaker, trainer, and knowledge management adviser (USA)

What would you like to see in a look back or follow up of this MiniMOOC?

Lessons learned from the moderators

77%

Other resources on ways of bringing learning online

70%

Results/numbers about participation and interaction of this MiniMOOC

52%

Results of this evaluation

37%

More information about using the aNewSpring platform

29%

I learned a lot from the MiniMOOC. It was long enough to cover the central concepts, but short enough to weave into my working day. The real value was found in discussing the content and sharing insights with my peers around the world. It was useful not only to validate some of my own experiences, but also to re-question my views and discover new gems that I can apply immediately.

Ryan Tracey, Learning Innovation Manager at Macquarie Group (AUS)

