Trusteeship Article

Top Public Policy Issues for Higher Education

As fiduciaries, board members have a responsibility to understand the effects of public policies on their students, institutions, and the broader higher education landscape. In this Trusteeship magazine article, Stephen G. Pelletier, independent higher education writer and author of AGB's Top Public Policy Issues for Higher Education 2021–2022, explores the trends that will shape the policy landscape in the next two years. To Divest or Not to Divest? We Believe That's the Wrong Question...

For many years, divestment has been seen as the fastest, most effective way to lower a portfolio's carbon footprint—and many universities and affiliated foundations continue to grapple with the question of whether to divest or not. In a new AGB blog post, Angie Santo-Walter of Russell Investments, an AGB sponsor, explains what materiality is and why it's the better solution for universities and affiliated foundations seeking to balance their desire to lower their investment portfolio's carbon footprint with the desire to maintain returns and invest in companies that will benefit from the green transition. FAQs

Planning and Strategy

This guide equips board members to understand the elements of strategy and planning, the situations requiring different types of strategic planning processes, and the responsibility of boards for strategic oversight. It provides the foundational basics for setting the strategic directions for institutions and foundations. Review the FAQs.

Podcast

Trusteeship Podcast Episode 21: The Principles of Trusteeship

In the spring, AGB published the Principles of Trusteeship: How to Become a Highly Effective Board Member for Colleges, Universities, and Foundations to empower all board members to serve as strategic thought partners in governance and leadership with their boards, presidents, and leadership teams. In a new podcast, AGB's Merrill Schwartz spoke with Marla Bobowick, the project director for the Principles of Trusteeship Working Group, and Jim Lyons, a former university president and member of the working group, about the process of developing the principles, how to utilize the principles as a board development tool, and their favorite principles. Toolkit

The New President Toolkit

Every new college and university presidency involves transition when a president departs and a new chief executive's tenure begins. But the success of the transition will depend on how well the new president can establish productive relationships with the board, administration, faculty, staff, and students, and the plans in place for this pivotal moment. That's why AGB has developed the New President Toolkit, which includes a host of resources that enable the new president to hit the ground running and chart a course for their institution that ensures well-being and sustainability.
