

Piper Judy

4/17/20

Phoebe's Delivery Service

Once upon a time lived a witch named Phoebe and her one eyed cat, JoeyJoey. They found refuge with a woman named Dolly Osono, who owned a bakery in Paris. Phoebe worked for Dolly but also created a witch delivery service, with the purpose of delivering more sustainable products in a sustainable way. You might think that is a lot but when Phoebe was younger she used to multitask even more activities. In school, she was part of the yearbook committee, part of sustainability, and taught three classes. She basically worked for the school.

Phoebe's first journey did not go as planned. She was delivering free-range mint chocolate ice cream to a man named Edward Scissorhands in the Pyrenees. She was too invested in ABBA and the ice cream melted down her back. She said to JoeyJoey, who was sitting on her head, "We can't arrive empty-handed. Let's fly down and see if there's anyone nearby who might have ice cream." Phoebe spotted a town not too far off, so she quickly flew on the broom to the town. Jumping off the broom, she found an ice cream parlor. Running to the store, she thought to herself at last she could put those painful years of cross country to good use. When she entered she saw a tall woman with dirty blond hair at the cash register. Phoebe answered in French in an extremely high pitched tone, "Do you have any Chocolate Mint ice cream? I need a quart."

The woman replied calmly, "Probably, I'll check the back."

The lady walked back into the store. While Phoebe waited, she watched the TV because Criminal Minds was on. Finally, the woman came back with a tub of chocolate mint ice cream.

Phoebe threw her money on the table with a bright smile and ran outside and hopped back on her broom. She was back in the sky and going especially fast so she wouldn't be late. After the delivery, she flew back to Paris and walked up the stairs into her room and turned on the dancing pig lamp that sat next to her bed.

The next day Phoebe got up early and made a delivery to a man named Jack Skellington who lived in Amsterdam. When she got back she was exhausted because the trip was so long. She went to put on a comfy sweatshirt but while she was looking for one she came across a Hillary Clinton mask which knocked the life back into her. Already being in a bad mood from her long trip, Phoebe started talking to JoeyJoey but there was no response. She then yelled at him trying to get him to talk but instead, but she heard just regular purrs. She realized she couldn't understand JoeyJoey anymore. With this new information, a grey cloud hung over Phoebe, and instead of doing work she just sat in her bed looking at the ceiling.

Her grieving silence was interrupted when she heard a knocking on her door. She saw a tall figure that started talking to her. After a little while she realized that it was the lady from the parlor. The lady said to her "You might not remember me, but I work at the Parlor..." She paused and said, "Can we talk downstairs instead?" Phoebe nodded her head in agreement. The two walked down stairs and sat next to the live photo booth. "My name is Ella Sula. You left your wallet at the store." She stopped after she noticed that Phoebe looked like the corpse bride and asked, "Are you ok?" Phoebe's eyes opened a little bit more and she blurted out everything that had happened, speaking as fast as Nicki Minaj in "Pound the Alarm." After Phoebe had finished ranting, Ellsula looked at Phoebe's brown eyes and said "You just need to find a new purpose, of exsperence something thats help. then you'll be able to talk to your cat and fly on your broom."

After Ella Sula's visit, Phoebe was filled with more hope and went downstairs to continue working. As she stood at the cash register she noticed that her Twin Peaks episode had just ended. So she started to flip through the channels when she saw on the news that her friend Tombo was in an airship crash. Phoebe threw off her apron and sprinted out the door with her broom, not caring that she might not be able to fly. Quickly she jumped on it and flew off in the sky then she saw Tombo falling, he was just about to hit the group. But she dive bombed at him and caught him, pulling him onto her broom. She flew him back to the bakery. The minutes she got off the broom she realized she had gained her powers back. Then in the corner of her eye she saw JoeyJoey, she heard him say while licking his paw, "Why didn't you bring me on the broom?" Phoebe's face glowed and her smile basically filled her face. Later that day she re-opened her business and was flooded with requests for deliveries from Amsterdam to Chicago. The business gave her many riches, and from the fame from her business helped her gain a spot on the witches council where she was the head of environmental rights.