

We surveyed 107 CEOs, Directors and Managers in September 2020 to understand how Covid-19 has impacted how they feel about their work experience and workplace culture

64% of the time
Managers think they're on the same page as others in the business.

78% of the time
Company Directors believe others in the organisation have strong team understanding.

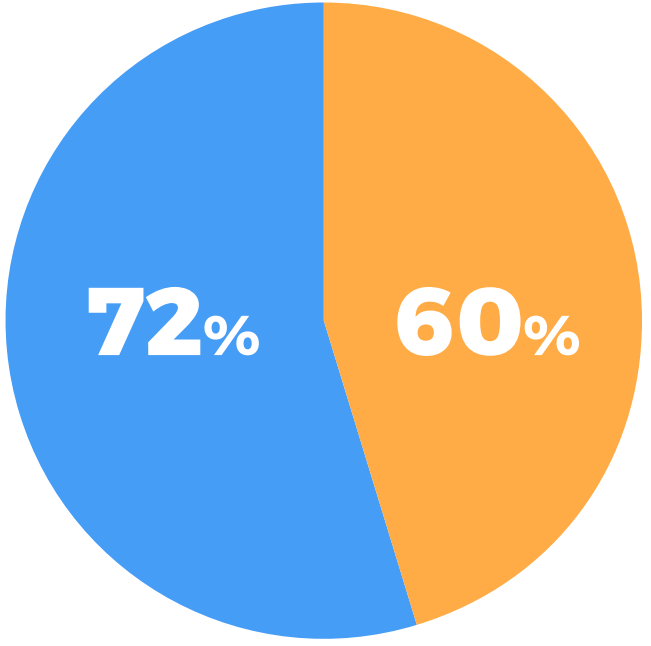

61% of the time
Managers would like more background information before starting certain tasks.

57% of the time
Managers would like to feel better prepared for certain situations.

40% of the time
Managers don't feel they have the knowledge required to complete their tasks.

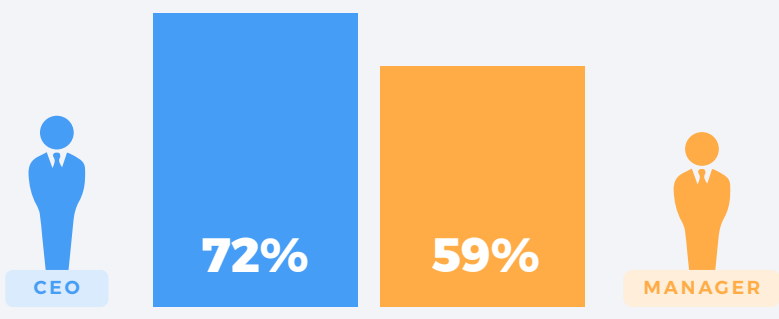

KNOWLEDGE

How much of the time do Managers and Directors feel they have the knowledge necessary to complete tasks at work?

RESOURCES

How much of the time do Managers and Directors feel they have the resources they need to confidently carry out tasks at work?

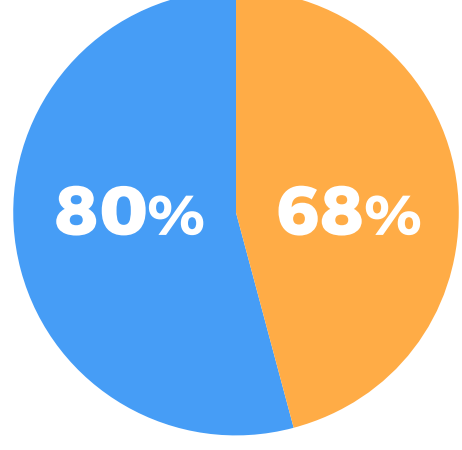

55% of the time
Managers would like more support from their senior leaders.

SECURITY

How much of the time do Managers and Directors feel secure in their role at work during Covid-19?

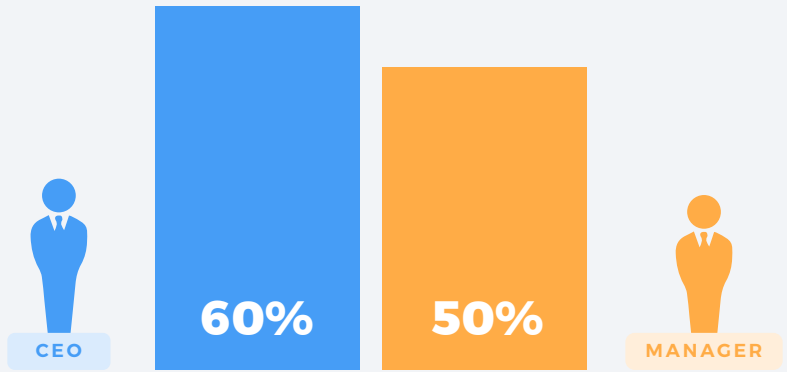

55% of the time
Managers don't have time to clear their head, and feel they have to keep going.

65% of the time
Managers think the culture expects them to be continuously busy.

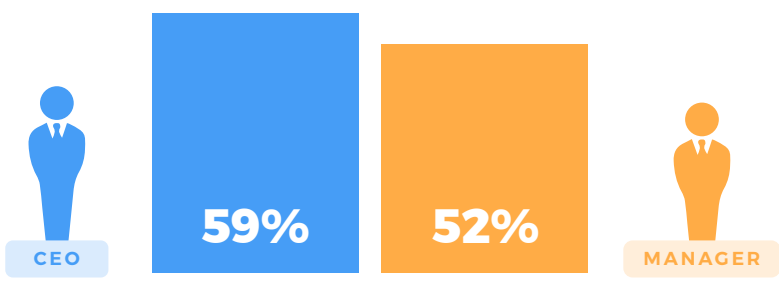

HEADSPACE

How much of the time do Managers and Directors feel they have to clear their head at work?

FREE FROM WORRY

How much of the time do Managers and Directors feel they have the resources they need to confidently carry out tasks at work?

49% of the time
Managers would like to be clearer on what is expected from them.

65% of the time
Managers think the organisation should make sure people have the same expectations.