

Project Summary:

In order to have a successful story, one must remember the past, live in the present and look to the future. Thus, we take a layered approach, in which each layer with its own qualities juxtapositioned to form an elaborate yet simple concept. San Jose's old light tower represents the past, the present is defined by the technology and innovation highlighting the region, and the future is simply San Jose as a city. The layers translated into our design language will be a tower of diffused light, a led mesh web-like sheet embracing the core and a pixelated landscape to embrace the breath-taking existing cityscape.
