

Inspired by Silicon Valley's innovations on human connection and how the San José Light Tower brought people together to the space of the city, this project does not propose an object but a space of inclusion. Framed by a wall of information, this space gives freedom to the individual while it also provokes a diversity of cultural activities, behaviors and effects. Not only does it emphasize the unique condition of the confluence of two rivers, but it also gives a gateway and an identity to Silicon Valley by conveying that real human connection is based on equity.
