

The "The Confluence Peak" consists of an observation tower and a park on the east part of the Arena Green. The landmark, designed to house public activities, supports the established space for public gatherings. It provides an exhibition space spread across the cascade of interior levels. The space inside the building presents a barrier-free recreational experience, inviting all visitors to take part in a vertical exhibition which culminates with an observation deck with a panoramic view of San Jose. The building is powered by solar panels located on its side.
