

Silicon Valley is the modern heart of technology. It is only fitting that it be a monument to the history of technology and society--to the myths and legends that we built into realities. The Temple of Technology and its Avenues of Techno-gods are a throw-back to the technological past in the technocratic present in an effort to build a space where the next generations of dreamers and innovators can go to think and feast and dream and build the future of technology and the future of our species.
