

As though rising from the converging rivers below, the Dragons of Silicon Valley are colossal sculptures based on the form of a dragonfly. With 255 foot wing spans and 185 feet in the air, they would be unmissable. Designed to be interactive, visitors could walk the entire length of the sculptures from tail to head and over from one fly to the other. Elevators would be available to take visitors to the main body cavity. The eyes, body and tail will be clad with color tinted glass panels and lit from within for a colorful glow at night.
