

GEOME at Arena Green consists of two dynamic geometric structures each containing their own unique micro-biomes. The project seeks to harmonize both the landscape of Confluence Point and the rich technological history of Silicon Valley by blurring our experiences with nature through digital and organic representations of natural and artificial environs. On the west site, Terra Box captures the local hemisphere through digital dramatizations across sweeping visual displays. Paradise Prism, on the east side, is nature's jewelry box. Its airy recreational path arcs through a lush sky garden capturing an expansive ecology into a share-able experience for the community.
