

Cocoon is the spatial demonstration for the crystalized ecosystem of relations we ascribe to a new social contract, which is based on innovation. It is a cascaded collection of live-work units for the freshly beginning innovators, which is a challenging assemblage with contemporary modular construction technology. As a social proposal, Cocoon provides initial support for innovation as a basic public amenity. As a spatial proposal, it gives a structural form to the community of innovators and the core of the new social contract to which Silicon Valley has been leading the way.