

A center for innovation and new opportunity, San Jose sits in the land between two mountains, its sunshine and light of new discoveries filling the sky. Inspired by the city's nickname, The Valley of Opportunity, The Loop is a monument that captures this essence of San Jose. From above, the monument is the hub, a ring for people to collect at its center. From the side, the monument is the valley, balancing on its lowest point, its two ends, like mountains, extending into the sky. From below, the monument is the sun and light, towering overhead with its infinite rays.
