

PROJECT SUMMERY

The inception of the concept was to inspire people to explore the city much more intimate and personal, to have a form that they can interact, walk in it and see value in that. The time you spend away from the strains of work or life will be the true value worth more than money, and I see The Urban Wall – as I call the project, a small portion to fill some of that void.