

My idea is to build a Tower as a symbol of Silicon Valley's strength of innovation.

The Tower of Joy would present results of efficient use of ingenious human thoughts for the benefit of the whole mankind. A colorful, joyful monument visible from the whole neighborhood would empower to creative work and friendly encounters. It would encourage to think bigger than just about worldly matters.

The Tower would function in a harmony of contrast with stiff, monochromatic, urbanistic forms.

The aesthetic convention I propose for this artistic work intentionally refers to iconic visions of modernism and American minimalists.
