

Inspired by Katsushika Hokusai's woodblock print, The Wave is destined to become the next "must see" destination for generations to come with its unique lighting panels setting it apart from all other monuments. Although twice as tall as the nearby SAP Center, The Wave compliments its surroundings and builds upon Silicon Valley's tradition of innovation and experimentation. Solar panels incorporated into the design give it a zero-energy footprint even as it shines through the night. As much as "Under the Wave Off Kanagawa," has captivated the public for over a century, The Wave will do so for the next one.
