

Landmarks having passive experiences is true all over the world but it is especially accurate in a region like the Silicon Valley, where residents lack physical connections and are connected by devices.

The Silicon Valley Screens seeks to establish its own Architectural category. By using successful spatial qualities, groundbreaking technology and the inherent connectivity that exists in the region, this Landmark would find solutions to these problems and create new experiences.

The Silicon Valley Screens would hope to not only redefine Landmarks but also set forth a new reality where physical space can create active experiences that connect individuals.
