HATCHING is a confluence of science and art. It offers free working spaces for tech start-ups and free venues for young artists to display their work. It creates an architectural space open to all, where people can communicate, share and witness the birth of some great ideas.