

Project Summary

re [LINK] expresses the push and pull of social connection and disconnection created by technology within our urban society. The landmark is intended to promote social interaction through a reading and conversational space while critiquing our relationship with technology. The tall concrete tree with the open library serves as a central hub. The vined passages and pavilions, setback from the base of the tree, serve as interactive spaces. The east side has two basketball and two tennis courts with painted geometric and digital patterns that activate the space, encouraging human interaction.
