

And then God said, “let there be light”.

From a boundless dark, he molded light. He called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And this can be called the primordial form of the duality.

However, the fundamentals of duality have no significance to the Creator until he sees an image of his duality. Thus came man and woman. As we draw this story out from the bounds of religion and let it spin on the orbit of our mind, we discover that the more the orbit shrinks towards the center of our conscience, the more it becomes clear that the forces of duality are not just opposites they are complementary. They don't cancel out each other rather they balance each other like a dual-wing of a bird. Verily, just as Eve was pulled out from the ribcage of Adam so we brought up a civilization from the heart of nature. As the human race so painstakingly evolves to sentience, it learns to use this dual feature of nature-science relationship and starts to transcend the physical law it is made of. There's hardly any difference between reality and fantasy now. To understand how we left the dark ages (which wasn't all that long ago) to where we are today, we have to look at Silicon Valley's evolution.

The great Bill Hewlett once said, 'the beginning of Silicon Valley was a supernova.' If we wrap the thread of the discussion based on these words- such a concept becomes clear that this "supernova" is a metaphorical expression of the original archetypal reflective duality.

Just as the explosion of stars creates elements that in turn create a generation of stars and planet, so too Silicon Valley caused a rippling effect that set the stage for future events. Billions of inventions and ideas that made our life a bit easier originated from this single place. This explosion of endless brilliance is what created a modern renaissance and guided us from the “age of depression” to the age of Silicon Valley”.

In this part of the story, we leave nature and join technology, with this ideological supernova of "Silicon Valley". We became part of a new duality. Here we want to establish this understanding that the beginning and the end are never the opposite, this duality is a reflection of each other, the original, flowing- we just always need a supernova to play that epiphany.
