PenFinancial Credit Union to observe National Day of Truth and Reconciliation

August 4, 2021 - NIAGARA – The Government of Canada recently passed legislation to make September 30th a new federal statutory holiday called the National Day of Truth and Reconciliation.

This day commemorates the tragic history and lasting effects of the Canadian Residential Schools on indigenous survivors and their communities. This day also provides a meaningful way for all Canadians to reflect on, and learn from the past.

PenFinancial will be observing the National Day of Truth and Reconciliation by closing our branches and offices on September 30, 2021 to enable our employees to recognize and remember the legacy of the residential schools. Only by understanding and learning from our past, can we heal and move forward as a country.
