CAREER

JOB TITLE

Tips: Keep your job title as simple as possible. This is the first thing the candidate will see when they're searching for your role so make sure it's something they'd recognise and have a basic understanding of. The keywords in your job title also affect where your advert appears when being searched for, so regularly searched terms like 'social worker' or 'housing officer' are more likely to appear higher up the page.

OPENING PARAGRAPH

Tips: Your opening paragraph should persuade candidates to read on and find out more about the position. You should give a brief outline of what the role is, the location and one of its major selling points, such as a unique benefit or aspect of the job. Much like your job title, using relevant keywords right at the start of the advert, such as the location, experience level and job type, will reaffirm the kind of role you're advertising.

ABOUT THE JOB

Tips: You don't need to cover every aspect of the job description in this section, just the most important bits. Try and split out the three most important parts of the job to keep this section brief enough for candidates to stay engaged, while also giving them valuable information about the job that will make relevant candidates want to apply.

ABOUT YOU

Tips: Candidates will often view this section to get a feel for whether they're the right perso for the role. Again, you can pick out the three most essential criteria from the person specification and outline them to candidates. Make sure you don't just list the role requirements but say how these skills will be used in the day-to-day activities of the job.

ABOUT US

Tips: This is where you can really start to sell yourself as an employer. List some of the benefits you offer, such as generous annual leave and flexible working. Try to tailor these to the audience you're targeting as well. More experienced applicants will probably be more interested in hearing about your pension scheme than apprentices!

As well as the organisation as a whole, think about the specific selling points of the department they are applying for. Is it a small, friendly team or a busy, bustling office? Any awards you have won or exciting projects you have coming up are also worth mentioning in this section.

APPLICATION PROCESS

Tips: Keep this section short and sweet. Mention the basic application method and what they'll need to know before clicking the apply button. Finish with a call to action such as 'apply now' to give candidates a sense of urgency to go on to submit an application.
