

Adamant Lane launches "LiquidityHub for Corporates" on their platform

Following the successful market implementation of 'LiquidityHub for Factoring', Adamant Lane AG (Adamant) launched a new product 'LiquidityHub for Corporates'. With a team now strengthened by - among others - trade finance professional Karen Oestreich (Karen has worked for the ABN AMRO group for more than 20 years), the company intends to respond to the rapidly growing supply chain finance market with innovative products.

According to Adamant, the special product design is characterised by the banking-as-a-microservice approach, which enables a customised process solution for the customer, real-time data collection, fraud protection, big data, SAP analytics cloud. These features provide increased efficiency in terms of unprecedented volumes and requirements while maintaining compliance and multi-jurisdiction capabilities.

Otto Johannsen (pictured), CTO and Co-Founder of Adamant, explains "our mission is to revolutionise the way complex trade finance processes are designed and operated in the future, based on a banking-as-a-microservice approach that leverages the newest cloud technologies and the reliability of SAP."

About Adamant Lane

Adamant Lane AG was founded in Zurich and has a subsidiary in Bielefeld, Germany. 'LiquidityHub' went live in 2019 after extensive development and is Adamant Lane's supply chain finance platform for the future of modern banking and financial services.

<https://bcrpub.com/news/adamant-lane-launches-liquidityhub-corporates-their-platform>