Under the Rules of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, this communication may be considered advertising. Such a relationship may only be established by an engagement letter signed by the firm. This memorandum is not intended as legal advice and should not be relied upon as such.
Introduction

This memorandum outlines the basic legal obligations of a public company under the Securities Act of 1933 (the “Securities Act”) and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the “Exchange Act”), as well as those of its directors, officers and principal stockholders (“insiders”). For these purposes, we assume that the Company is a domestic issuer and its shares are listed on the Nasdaq Global Market. On request, we will provide supplemental information for foreign private issuers, other exchange-listed companies and Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board companies. Companies that are traded on the Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board are subject to the same Securities Act and Exchange Act requirements as Nasdaq-listed companies, but are not subject to many of the corporate governance rules of Nasdaq. Exhibit A hereto is a summary SEC compliance checklist that indicates the source of the various compliance and governance rules; generally, OTC companies do not have to comply with many of the rules that are Nasdaq-only (though the OTCQX division has implemented certain governance requirements), but may want to adopt some as best practices or in preparation for later up listing to Nasdaq. In addition “smaller reporting companies”, defined to include, among others, companies with a public float (i.e., the equity held by non-insiders) of less than $250 million as of the end of their second fiscal quarter or revenues less than $100 million and a public float of less than $700 million, as well as “emerging growth companies,” as defined under the Jumpstart Our Business Startups Act (“JOBS Act”), are eligible to provide scaled-back disclosure in many instances in their Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) filings.

Generally, the recurring obligations of the Company and its insiders fall into the following categories:

(1) For the Company, (i) financial and other reports required to be filed with the SEC, as well as proxy statements and annual stockholder reports, (ii) reports and filings related to the listing of the Company’s Common Stock on the Nasdaq Global Market and (iii) general disclosure of corporate information to the marketplace; and

(2) For Insiders, (i) general insider trading restrictions relating to Company information and personal securities transactions, (ii) short-swing profits and beneficial ownership reporting to the SEC of transactions in Company securities and (iii) rules (e.g., Rule 144) relating to sales of restricted securities.

Attached as exhibits are short memoranda on various securities law-related topics. In addition to this memorandum and the summary SEC compliance checklist in Exhibit A, we wish to draw your particular attention to Exhibit B (Schedule of Recurring Filing Dates and Events) and Exhibit C (Memorandum on Insider Reporting and Liability for Short-Swing Trading).

Please note that the information in this memorandum can quickly become dated as a result of SEC or Nasdaq rule changes; counsel should always be consulted on current developments. The memorandum is updated from time to time, and if you wish to receive updates, please contact one of the attorneys listed on the cover page.

This memorandum is intended to provide a general treatment of a broad segment of the principal legal obligations of a public company and its insiders under the federal securities laws. It is not intended to provide an exhaustive treatment for every contingency.
In addition, this memorandum is not intended to establish an attorney-client relationship between the recipient and Sullivan & Worcester LLP. Such a relationship may only be established by an engagement letter signed by the firm. This memorandum is not intended as legal advice, and should not be relied upon as such.

I. SEC REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

A. Required Reports and Filings.

The principal purpose of various SEC filings required of the Company is to provide information about the Company on a continuing basis to ensure that buyers and sellers of the Company’s securities in the public markets have all of the information needed to make informed investment decisions. The Company’s filings can be accessed on the SEC’s website, and proper corporate governance also requires them to be accessible on the Company’s website.

Whenever reference is made in this memorandum to a filing date or due date, it refers to the date that the filing must actually be received by the SEC. Generally, if the due date of an SEC report is not a business day, the report is due on the next succeeding business day. SEC filings generally are required to be filed electronically using the SEC’s “EDGAR” System, which is discussed in further detail later in this memorandum. You will need to determine whether the Company will make EDGAR filings directly or rely upon a third party to do so, such as a financial printer. Procedures must be put in place in advance of the due date of the first filing.

1. Form 10-K – Annual Report.

This report must be filed with the SEC after the end of each fiscal year. For so-called “accelerated filers”, Form 10-K is due within 75 days after the fiscal year; for “large accelerated filers”, this deadline is 60 days. For all other issuers, the report is due in 90 days. The term “accelerated filer” means an issuer after it first meets the following conditions as of the end of its fiscal year:

- The aggregate market value of the voting and non-voting common equity held by non-affiliates of the issuer as of the end of its second fiscal quarter is $75 million or more (for “large accelerated filers” the threshold amount is $700 million);
- The issuer has been subject to the requirements of Section 13(a) or 15(d) of the Exchange Act for a period of at least twelve calendar months; and
- The issuer has filed at least one annual report (e.g., Form 10-K) pursuant to Section 13(a) or 15(d) of the Act.

Form 10-K calls for information much like that in a public offering prospectus. The information prescribed by the form includes:

- Description of the Company’s business;
- Discussion of risk factors impacting the Company’s business;
- Description of material properties used in the Company’s business;
- Description of legal proceedings in which the Company is involved and certain tax penalties, if any;
- Market for the Company’s Common Stock, related stockholder matters and the Company’s purchases of its equity securities;
Management’s Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations for the last two fiscal years (it should be noted that both by rule and current practice, MD&A disclosures are significantly more full-blown and candid than they have been historically, and, although financial projections are not technically required, disclosure of “known trends and uncertainties” is required);

Quantitative and qualitative disclosures about market risks;

Any unresolved SEC staff comments on previous SEC filings;

Audited financial statements (2 years of balance sheets and three years of income statements) in accordance with GAAP;

Changes in and disagreements with accountants on accounting and financial disclosure, if any;

Management’s report on disclosure controls and procedures and on internal control over financial reporting (for which compliance dates vary – see Exhibit D);

Information on directors and executive officers of the Company, including compensation;

Security ownership of certain beneficial owners and management as of a current date;

Availability of code of ethics;

Principal accounting fees and services;

Description of audit committee functions and identity of audit committee financial expert;

Certain relationships and related “insider transactions” in which the Company and its officers, directors and 10% stockholders participate; and Exhibits (with hyperlinks) and financial statement schedules.

There are rules permitting the incorporation of information by reference into Form 10-K from the Company's Proxy Statement and its Annual Report to Stockholders (both discussed below). Certain data must also be coded in in-line eXtensible Business Reporting Language (“XBRL”). It is important to note that the Form 10-K must be signed by the Company’s principal executive officer, principal financial and accounting officer, and a majority of the Company’s Board of Directors. A copy of Form 10-K and the related instructions can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms.htm. The Form 10-K is in a different format and serves a somewhat different function than the Annual Report to Stockholders which is distributed to each stockholder. The Annual Report to Stockholders is discussed at greater length in Item 10 below.
2. Form 10-Q – Quarterly Report.

These reports must be filed with the SEC following each of the Company’s first three fiscal quarters. For accelerated and large accelerated filers, the report is due 40 days after quarter-end. For all other issuers, the report is due in 45 days. Form 10-Q must include the following information:

- Condensed, unaudited comparative balance sheets, statements of income and statements of cash flow (and related XBRL in-line coding));
- Management’s Discussion and Analysis of Financial Condition and Results of Operations and a discussion relating to certain accounting changes and other data;
- Qualitative and quantitative disclosures about market risk;
- Management’s report on controls and procedures;
- Information with respect to new or changes in material legal proceedings, new or changed risk factors, unregistered sales of equity securities, use of proceeds and issuer repurchases, defaults in senior indebtedness and certain other information; and
- Periodic update regarding the use of proceeds derived from the Company’s initial public offering.

A copy of Form 10-Q and the related instructions can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms.htm

3. Form 8-K - Report of Material Events.

This form must be filed with the SEC within four business days after the occurrence of any of the specified events. Issuers must be constantly on guard to inform their legal advisers of the occurrence (or prospective occurrence) of these events. The events can be simply summarized as including virtually any material event relating to the Company. This list of reportable events is as follows:

- Entry into a material definitive agreement – requires the disclosure of material definitive agreements entered into by the company that are not made in the ordinary course of business and material amendments.
- Termination of a material definitive agreement – exemptions include expiration of an agreement on a stated termination date and completion of the obligations by all parties to an agreement.
- Bankruptcy or receivership.
- Completion of acquisition or disposition of assets – although the disclosure concerning a completed acquisition is required to be filed in the Form 8-K within four business days, the pro forma financial information and financial statements for a completed acquisition (but not disposition) are permitted to be filed by amendment up to seventy-one days later.
• Results of operations and financial condition – requires public announcements or releases of material non-public information regarding a company's results of operations or financial condition for a completed fiscal period to be furnished (e.g., an earnings press release). Typically, if there will also be an earnings call, these Form 8-Ks are filed before the call.

• Creation of a direct financial obligation or an obligation under an off-balance sheet arrangement – requires disclosure if a company becomes obligated under a direct financial obligation, such as a material loan agreement.

• Events that accelerate or increase a direct financial obligation or an obligation under an off-balance sheet arrangement.

• Costs associated with exit or disposal activities.

• Material impairments – requires disclosure when a board or an authorized officer concludes that a material charge for impairment to one or more of the company's assets, including, an impairment of securities or goodwill, is required under GAAP.

• Notice of delisting or failure to satisfy a continued listing rule or standard; transfer of listing.

• Unregistered sales of equity securities.

• Results of stockholders meetings.

• Material modification to rights of security holders.

• Changes in registrant's certifying accountant.

• Non-reliance on previously issued financial statements or a related report or completed interim review.

• Changes in control of the registrant.

• Departure of directors or principal officers; election of directors; appointment of principal officers, and entry into compensation agreements or other arrangements with these individuals.

• Amendments to corporate charter or bylaws; change in fiscal year.

• Temporary suspension of trading under registrant's employee benefit plans.

• Amendments to code of ethics; waiver of a provision of the code of ethics.

• Regulation FD disclosure - permits information to be furnished pursuant to and within the time periods mandated by Regulation FD (discussed below). The four business day filing deadline does not apply to disclosures under this item.

• Other events - permits disclosure of information that a company deems of importance to security holders, including information required to be filed pursuant to Regulation FD. The four business day filing deadline does not apply to disclosures under this item, but if used as the primary Regulation FD compliance vehicle, an even quicker deadline may apply.

- Financial statements (generally related to material acquisitions) and exhibits (with hyperlinks).
- A copy of Form 8-K and related instructions can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms.htm.

4. Rule 10b-17 Report.

Under Rule 10b-17 of the Exchange Act, the Company must give notice to Nasdaq at least 10 days prior to the record date, of (i) a dividend or other distribution in cash or in kind, including a dividend or distribution of any security; (ii) a stock split or reverse split; or (iii) a rights or other subscription offering. Nasdaq has developed online forms for reporting cash dividends. These forms are available at www.nasdaq.com.

5. Earnings Reports Under Underwriting Agreements.

Underwriting agreements relating to public offerings typically require the issuer to make generally available to its stockholders, as soon as practicable, an “earning statement” complying with the provisions of Section 11(a) of the Securities Act, and covering period of at least a twelve (12) months beginning after the effective date of the applicable registration statement. Generally, the Company will satisfy this requirement by providing stockholders with an annual report or the Company’s Form 10-K.

6. Registration Statement on Form S-8.

A registration statement on the short-form Form S-8 can be used to register shares for offer and sale pursuant to certain employee benefit plans (including certain compensatory contracts), so that certain employees, directors and certain consultants (that are not entities) may receive publicly tradable securities under such plans. Form S-8 registration statements become effective immediately upon filing and are updated continuously and automatically when the issuer files its reports required under the Exchange Act. The Company is required to deliver to participants in the plan its Annual Report to Stockholders (or until preparation of its first Annual Report, the IPO prospectus), together with a prospectus containing other specified information with respect to the benefit plan. The Company is required to maintain, in a separate file, copies of the Form S-8 registration statement, its most recent Annual Report (or IPO prospectus), and the document referred to above containing information regarding the plan. In addition, the Company is required to deliver to all employees participating in the plan (including all holders of outstanding options) copies of all reports, proxy statements and other communications sent generally to stockholders, at the same time as they are sent to the stockholders. For employees, companies can deliver these documents via e-mail, subject to certain conditions. Directors and officers acquire registered shares upon exercise of a stock option covered by a Form S-8 registration statement; nevertheless, they will have to resell those shares either pursuant to Rule 144, or pursuant to a separate re-sale prospectus. (See Section V regarding Rule 144 restrictions if no re-sale prospectus is on file.)
7. Forms 3, 4 and 5 – Reports of Ownership of Securities.

Every person who is an officer, director or 10% stockholder of the Company must file a Form 3 indicating the number of shares of the Company’s Common Stock which such person beneficially owns. Subsequent to the IPO, each new officer, director or 10% stockholder of the Company must file a Form 3 when elected to office or becoming a 10% stockholder. For such persons, the form will be due within 10 days of the date they become subject to this reporting requirement.

Subsequent to the filing of a Form 3, each officer, director and 10% stockholder must file a Form 4 or a Form 5 to report certain changes in beneficial ownership.

Copies of Forms 3, 4 and 5 can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms. There are no filing fees for these forms.

Generally:

(a) most transactions, such as sales of stock or exercise of an option, must be reported on a Form 4 within two business days after the date of the transaction on which such person’s ownership of the Company’s securities changes; and

(b) a few other reportable transactions, such as gifts of stock, must be reported on Form 5 within 45 days after the end of the fiscal year if not voluntarily reported earlier on a Form 4 during the year.

Forms 3, 4 and 5 must be filed electronically with the SEC. Because these are not Company filings, each officer, director and 10% stockholder required to make a filing must obtain his or her own EDGAR identification numbers (discussed in more detail under Section I.A.12 below). However, the Company is required to post or link to the reports on its website.

To ensure filing compliance, any officer or director who proposes to dispose of or acquire shares (or options or other derivative securities) of the Company’s Common Stock or any rights to acquire such shares should immediately report such proposed disposition or acquisition to the Company’s general counsel or other person designated to perform this function.

A discussion of the Section 16(b) six-month insider trading prohibitions to which these Forms 3, 4 and 5 relate is set forth under Section I.C.1 below. A more detailed explanation of the obligations of the Company’s officers, directors and 10% stockholders under Section 16 of the Exchange Act, including these Forms 3, 4 and 5 is set forth in Exhibit C.

8. Proxy Statement.

Prior to annual meetings of the Company’s stockholders, the Company must distribute to its stockholders a proxy statement in the form dictated by SEC rules. Proxy statements for a typical annual meeting (i.e., one at which the only matters to be acted upon are the election of directors, approval of certain compensation matters, the ratification of accountants and certain proposals by stockholders) must be filed with the SEC and Nasdaq not later than the date they are distributed to stockholders. Proxy statements for meetings at which non-routine matters (such as an amendment to the Company’s corporate charter) are to be submitted to stockholders should be pre-filed with the SEC a minimum of 10 calendar days before public distribution, although in most cases a longer period is appropriate. Final proxy statements and Annual Reports to Stockholders (described below) must be posted on a non-SEC website which must be configured to comply with SEC technical parameters.

Proxy statements for annual meetings (other than for emerging growth companies) need to include a “say-or-pay” proposal allowing stockholders to vote on the executive compensation disclosures in the proxy statements. Every six years, the stockholders will also vote on how often they want to vote on say-or-pay - either every one, two or three years. While each of these proposals are non-binding, ordinarily the Company and its Board of Directors will take its stockholders’ vote in consideration when considering executive compensation and the frequency of the vote on future “say-or-pay” proposals.

Normally, the Company should plan on having the Company’s transfer agent mail the proxy statement to its stockholders at least five weeks to a month or so before the annual meeting. SEC regulations require inquiries of street and nominee name holders regarding the numbers of beneficial owners for whom shares are held, so that additional sets of materials can be supplied. These inquiries should be made by the Company’s transfer agent at least 20 business days before the record date of the meeting of stockholders, thus requiring adequate prior notice by the Company to its transfer agent of such mailing date.

As an alternative to mailing, the SEC also allows companies to “deliver” proxy statements and Annual Reports to Stockholders (described below) by posting them on a company or third party website and notifying stockholders of their availability and website location, along with a notice of the meeting at least 40 days before the meeting.

In addition to information about the meeting, internet availability of proxy materials and required votes, the proxy statement must also contain specific disclosure concerning prospectus-type information about management, related person transactions and stock ownership, deliberations of the compensation committee of the Board of Directors as to the relationship of corporate performance to executive compensation and as to the basis for all elements of executive officer compensation. Extensive disclosures are required for executive and director compensation and equity grant practices, information about compensation consultants and risks related to compensation. These rules require significant tabular and narrative information about all types of compensation and a “Compensation Discussion and Analysis” covering how and why executive compensation is determined and approved, as well as information about how the CEO’s pay relates to median employee compensation. The proxy statement must also describe committees of the Board of Directors, the determinations of independence of directors, the process for nominations and recommendations for nominations for Board seats, beneficial ownership by directors and officers, communications with directors and minimum qualifications for directors, Board leadership structure, why the Company believes its nominees are qualified to serve on the Board, potential payments upon a change of control, as well as fees paid to directors. Further, the proxy statement must disclose all of the fees paid to the Company’s accountants and any policy for pre-approval of non-audit services, as well as contain a report of the audit committee of the Board. In some circumstances, stockholders may have the ability to include their own proposals in the Company’s proxy statement.

If any other matters are submitted to stockholders for a vote, the proxy statement must contain disclosures with respect to these additional matters. If options are repriced, the proxy statement must also contain specific disclosures concerning such repricing. It is important to note that the proxy rules require specific disclosure if any director has attended fewer than 75% of the combined number of meetings of the full Board plus any Board committees on which such director serves, and also require a statement of the Company’s policy for directors’ attendance at annual meetings of stockholders and how many directors attended the prior year’s meeting. Additional SEC rules apply in the event of proxy contests and with respect to proposals furnished by stockholders. In addition, the Company is required to disclose to the public in its proxy statement the name of any director, officer or 10% stockholder who has not met the applicable Form 3, 4 and/or 5 reporting obligations in a timely manner.

Under the SEC proxy rules, the Annual Report to Stockholders must be distributed (or made electronically available, as referenced above) with or before the Proxy Statement furnished in connection with the annual election of directors. The Annual Report often contains a CEO’s or President’s letter to stockholders about developments in the business over the last year. Other than certain required financial information and a required graph illustrating company stock performance, there are only a limited number of specific SEC requirements as to content. The Annual Report is not required to be pre-filed with or reviewed by the SEC, although it must be mailed to the SEC upon distribution to stockholders or instead, if certain conditions are met, posted on the Company’s website. The Annual Report to Stockholders, like all other financial communications, can be a source of legal liability if it contains a material misstatement or omission.

10. Schedule 13G and Schedule 13D.

Any person not eligible to file a Schedule 13G (described below) who makes an acquisition of an issuer’s stock that results in ownership of more than 5% of the class of securities must file a Schedule 13D with the SEC within 10 days of such acquisition. Ownership of stock for those purposes is based on whether a person has sole or shared voting or investment control, and so may be broader than shares directly owned. The underlying purpose of Schedule 13D is for these investors to disclose their plans or intentions regarding the control, business purpose and structure of a public company. Any material change in information previously reported on Schedule 13D must be reported promptly on an amendment to Schedule 13D. As a general rule, the acquisition or disposition of 1% or more of a registered class of securities is considered material. Schedule 13D requires disclosure relating to the issuer, the security, the stockholder’s identity and background, the source and amount of funds or other consideration used to acquire the securities, the purpose of the transaction, the stockholder’s total equity interest in the issuer, and other information. A copy of the Schedule 13D or 13G must also be sent to the Company by registered or certified mail.

The short form Schedule 13G, which requires much less detail about the background of the acquisition of the stock and the holder, applies to certain qualified institutional investors and passive investors where securities have been acquired in the ordinary course of business without the intent of affecting the control of the Company. The short form may be used until the investor owes 20% or more of the outstanding class of securities, provided such investors have not acquired or do not hold the securities to influence control of the issuer. Any such Schedule 13G-eligible person who owns, directly or indirectly, more than 5% of a class of equity securities of the Company as of the effective date of the Company’s registration statement under the Exchange Act or as of December 31 of each year, is required to make a filing with the SEC on Schedule 13G by February 14 of the following year. Each person or group of persons who owns (and/or holds presently exercisable options for) more than 5% of the Company’s Common Stock and who has filed a Schedule 13G must file amendments to Schedule 13G by February 14 of the year following the year in which certain changes in their equity ownership occur.

No fee is required for a Schedule 13D, 13G or a 13D or 13G amendment, but filers must first obtain EDGAR (as defined below) codes for electronic filing with the SEC.

A copy of Schedules 13G and 13D and the related instructions can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms.htm.

11. Form SD (Specialized Disclosure Report)

Pursuant to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, certain filers that are subject to reporting under the Exchange Act, and utilize “Conflict Minerals” in their products, are required to file an annual Form SD by May 31 each year. Form SD is a specialized form that is intended to disclose a filer’s use of “Conflict Minerals” originating from the Democratic Republic of Congo, or an adjoining country, provided the Conflict Minerals are “necessary to the functionality or production” of a product manufactured or contracted to be manufactured by the filer.

A copy of Form SD and the related instructions can be found at https://www.sec.gov/files/formsd.pdf.

12. The SEC’s Electronic Data Gathering and Retrieval (“EDGAR”) System.

a. Overview. Most SEC documents, including Forms 10-K and 10-Q and proxy statements, must be filed with the SEC electronically using the SEC’s Electronic Data Gathering and Retrieval system. In addition, companies are required to tag certain financial data using XBRL. Filings on EDGAR that have XBRL-tagged data will allow companies, analysts and investors to more easily compare company data using a variety of analysis tools.

b. EDGAR-Mandated Filings. Every EDGAR-mandated filing by a public company must be made in electronic form. EDGAR-mandated filings include Forms 10-K, 10-Q and 8-K, proxy statements, Forms 3, 4 and 5, Form D (used for certain private placements), Schedules 13D and 13G, all registration statements and most other SEC filings. At present, the following filings do not need to be made via EDGAR: Form 144 and the Annual Reports to Stockholders.

c. How to use EDGAR. Documents are filed with the EDGAR system electronically. The Company must obtain (via a short electronic application) specific identifying codes and passwords that will allow it to make filings via EDGAR. These numbers can be obtained, usually within one or two days by electronically filing a short application called a Form ID (see https://www.filermanagement.edgarfiling.sec.gov/filermgmt/selectFormId.html) followed up by a notarized fax or PDF by email of the application. For questions about obtaining EDGAR identification numbers, contact Company counsel or go to the SEC’s EDGAR filer management website at www.filermanagement.edgarfiling.sec.gov. The document and all exhibits must be provided to the SEC in computer-readable form and all exhibits listed must be hyperlinked. Moreover, the EDGAR system contains a complex system of rules regarding the format of the electronic submissions. A substantial amount of work may be required to prepare a document for filing once it is in its final substantive form. Specifically, since all exhibits must also be filed electronically (and hyperlinked), it is important to obtain computer-readable forms (not images) of all requisite material agreements (e.g., leases and bank loan agreements) that have been prepared by firms other than the Company or counsel preparing the EDGAR filing.

d. Implementing Methodology to Comply with EDGAR. Public companies have taken one of two approaches to addressing the EDGAR requirement. A large number of companies have charged their own accounting staff with the task of setting up a suitable computer facility and making the required filings “in-house.” A second group of companies use their financial printer or outside counsel to make their filings. A manually executed hard copy of every EDGAR filing must be retained for at least five years. All signatures must also be typed into all documents filed.

Under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, each Form 10-K and Form 10-Q must contain certifications by the Company’s CEO and CFO to the effect that they have reviewed the filing, and believe that the filing does not contain any material misstatements or omissions and that the included financial statements and other financial information fairly present the Company’s financial condition. The certifications are also required to certify (if true) that the Company’s “disclosure controls and procedures” are adequate to ensure the timeliness, accuracy and completeness of its periodic SEC reports. These disclosure controls and procedures are mandated by the Exchange Act and have to be re-examined by the CEO and CFO as of the end of each fiscal quarter and the results reported on. Among the procedures commonly implemented by reporting companies are the designation of a “Disclosure Committee” of key insiders that will assist in the evaluation process and review all Exchange Act filings and other public disclosures. Typically, it is the CEO and CFO who have the most comprehensive and current information about the Company that is relevant to disclosure compliance. It has become critical that these officers become actively involved in the preparation of the Company’s disclosure documents.

Additionally, beginning with a company’s second annual report, annual certifications are required that the Company has in place internal control over financial reporting to provide reasonable assurance on the integrity of the financial statements and internal financial processes. Unless the Company is small enough for an exemption or is an “emerging growth company,” the Company’s outside accountants also must provide an attestation report on internal controls. Management must base its assessment on a “recognized control framework”. The so-called COSO framework is the most common framework of choice in the U.S. and is extremely complex. The SEC and Public Company Accounting Oversight Board continue to try to make the rules more user-friendly, but to date they remain challenging to apply. As a result, although management’s certifications are relatively simple in form, the underlying procedures and record keeping requirements supporting the certifications have expanded significantly the cost and complexity of Exchange Act compliance. The compliance dates for the internal control rules vary and are summarized in Exhibit D.

All Exchange Act filings must be carefully prepared and filed in a timely manner to ensure full compliance by the Company with the Exchange Act. It is also important to note that the Company’s reports under the Exchange Act are likely to be incorporated by reference (i) in any number of presently unanticipated agreements or documents (e.g., merger or acquisition agreements), and (ii) in current and future registration statements of the Company, whether filed on behalf of itself or on behalf of selling security holders. Therefore, the uses and, in particular, the liabilities which can attach to these reports can go beyond those associated strictly with Exchange Act compliance.

Compliance with the reporting requirements of the Exchange Act is also a precondition to the availability of the exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act afforded by Rule 144 (described below). Rule 144 is of special importance to all the Company’s stockholders who bought their Common Stock prior to the Company’s initial public offering or in a subsequent private placement and who wish to sell that “restricted stock” publicly. The Company’s affiliates (officers, directors and major stockholders) will also generally use Rule 144 to sell their stock. In addition, Form S-8 (see Section I.A.6 above) will be unavailable if the Company is not up to date in its Exchange Act reporting. Finally, future use by the Company of a short-form registration statement on Form S-3, which facilitates and expedites certain offerings by more seasoned companies, is conditioned on 12 months of the timely filing of Exchange Act reports.

In making public disclosures, the Company should also be mindful if it intends to include financial measures not calculated in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. A common example is the use of EBITDA in a press release. While not prohibited, Regulation G and related rules require certain reconciliations and disclosures regarding the usefulness of such measures. The SEC has recently intensified its scrutiny of non-GAAP financial measures, and therefore, counsel should be consulted prior to including non-GAAP financial measures in any filing, press release, website section, presentation or other public forum.

Controlling persons of the Company can have liability with respect to any Exchange Act filings that are not in compliance with the rules and regulations of the SEC, unless the controlling person can show that he or she “acted in good faith and did not directly or indirectly induce the act or acts constituting the violation or cause of action.” Accordingly, internal procedures should be established by the Company to assure timely, accurate and complete reporting as required under the Exchange Act.

As the above discussion of Exchange Act reports reflects, there are a number of inter-related processes which will recur on an annual cycle in connection with the Company’s SEC reporting. In order to prepare its SEC filings, each year questionnaires will be circulated to all directors, officers and 5% stockholders as a means of generating the required information. A specific schedule will have to be established to ensure timely SEC reporting and proper organization of the Annual Meeting and related matters. Close coordination is required among the Company, counsel, auditors, printers and anyone else participating in the preparation of the Annual Report to Stockholders. To allow a comfortable timetable:

- Questionnaires should be circulated to directors, officers and 5% stockholders in ample time to consider replies in preparing proxy material.
- Preliminary proxy materials (if required) should be filed with the SEC at least 15 days prior to the expected date of delivery to stockholders.
- Definitive proxy materials and the Annual Report to Stockholders should be mailed to stockholders and filed with the SEC at least four weeks (or, under e-proxy rules, posted electronically 40 days) prior to the Annual Meeting date.
A record date should be established in consultation with the transfer agent prior to the mailing or electronic delivery date.

Inquiries must be made by the transfer agent of brokers and others concerning the number of sets of materials they will require for persons whose stock is held in street names.

Inquiries must be made by the transfer agent of clearing agency nominees concerning the brokerage firms and other institutions which hold the Company’s stock on the clearing agencies’ books, to get names of clearing agency members who hold the stock.

Non-routine agenda items for the annual meeting need to be identified.

Board resolutions should be adopted dealing with formalities relating to the Annual Meeting (e.g., setting meeting and record dates, specifying purposes of the meeting, designating proxies, authorizing preparation and distribution of proxy material).

Signatures of a majority of the Board of Directors must be obtained on the Form 10-K.

Attached as Exhibit B is a schedule of a calendar-year company’s recurring filing requirements and events.

Should the Company’s securities become listed in the future on any additional securities exchanges, it will become subject to the rules of that exchange covering a number of additional filing and corporate governance requirements, which are not the subject matter of this memorandum.

B. Corporate Governance Requirements.

1. Ban on Loans to Directors and Officers.

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 provides that it shall be unlawful for any issuer, directly or indirectly, including through any subsidiary, to extend or maintain credit, to arrange for the extension of credit, or to renew an extension of credit, in the form of a personal loan to or for any director or executive officer (or equivalent thereof) of that issuer.

2. Nasdaq Corporate Governance Rules.

The Nasdaq corporate governance rules are applicable to Nasdaq Global Select Market, Nasdaq Global Market and Nasdaq Capital Market companies. In summary form, these rules require that, among other things:

- A majority of directors be independent, which independence standards have been tightened;
- Independent directors conduct separate regularly scheduled meetings, or “executive sessions,” which are recommended to occur at least twice each year;
- The compensation of the CEO and other executive officers be determined (or recommended to the Board of Directors for determination) by a compensation committee comprised solely of independent directors that meet more stringent standards of independence;

- Director nominees be selected (or recommended for the Board of Directors’ selection) either by a majority of the independent directors or a nominations committee comprised solely of independent directors;

- Audit committee members meet more stringent standards of independence and audit committees must assume increased powers and responsibilities;

- The audit committee or another independent body of the Board of Directors review and oversee all related person transactions;

- A code of conduct applicable to all directors, officers and employees be adopted and disclosed, as well as a whistleblower policy; and

- Stockholder approval must be obtained of most equity compensation plans.

Some additional details regarding certain of these requirements are as follows:

Director independence requirements: Nasdaq’s rules require that a majority of the Board of Directors be comprised of “independent directors.” The Board of Directors is required to make an affirmative determination that individuals serving as independent directors do not have a relationship with the Company that would impair their independence, which determinations must be disclosed in the Company’s Exchange Act filings. The Nasdaq definition of “independent director” is quite stringent – independence is considered inconsistent with the director or a family member having employment or specified compensation arrangements with the Company, certain director/officer interlocks, association with the Company’s outside auditor and other circumstances. The full definition of who is considered independent under Nasdaq rules is included as Exhibit F.

Independent directors must conduct executive sessions: Independent directors must have regularly scheduled meetings, or “executive sessions,” at which only independent directors are present. These sessions, which Nasdaq contemplates will occur at least twice a year, are designed to encourage and enhance communication among independent directors.

Determination of executive compensation by independent directors: Nasdaq’s rules currently require that the compensation of the CEO and all other executive officers of the Company must be determined, or recommended to the board for determination, by a compensation committee comprised solely of independent directors that has a charter. The Board of Directors must consider all factors relevant to determining if a director has a relationship to the company which is material to that director’s ability to be independent from management in connection with the duties of a compensation committee member, including certain fees paid to and affiliations of such director.

In addition, before selecting or receiving advice from a compensation consultant, legal counsel or other adviser, the compensation committee must take into consideration certain independence factors listed in Nasdaq rules.
Nomination of directors by independent nominations committee: Nasdaq’s rules require that director nominees must either be selected, or recommended for the board’s selection, either by (1) a majority of the independent directors or (2) a nominations committee comprised solely of independent directors. Each issuer must certify that it has adopted a formal, written charter or board resolution, as applicable, addressing the nominations process.

Heightened independence standards for audit committee membership: The Company is required by Nasdaq to certify that it has and will continue to have, an audit committee of at least three members, each of whom must:

- in addition to meeting the general director independence requirements, (i) satisfy the criteria for independence set forth in Exchange Act Rule 10A-3 (i.e., not accept any consulting, advisory or other compensation from the issuer or be an “affiliated person” of the issuer or any subsidiary thereof) and (ii) not have participated in the preparation of financial statements of the Company at any time during the past three years; and
- be able to read and understand financial statements at the time of appointment to the audit committee, including the balance sheet, income statement and cash flow statement.

Audit Committee Financial Expert: Each issuer must certify to Nasdaq that it has, and will continue to have, at least one member of the audit committee who has past employment experience in finance or accounting, requisite professional certification in accounting or any other comparable experience or background which results in the individual’s financial sophistication, including being or having been a CEO, CFO or other senior officer with financial oversight responsibilities. The SEC also requires that the name of any audit committee financial expert (using a somewhat narrower definition than Nasdaq) be disclosed in each Form 10-K. The SEC does not require that a company have one, but it must disclose if it does not. We recommend having at least one member of the audit committee who qualifies not only under Nasdaq rules but under the SEC’s definition.

Duties and responsibilities of audit committee: Sarbanes-Oxley, Exchange Act Rule 10A-3 and the Nasdaq governance rules prescribe certain duties and responsibilities of the audit committee. The audit committee (1) is responsible for selecting, determining the compensation of and monitoring the performance of the outside auditors; (2) must review the Company’s annual and quarterly financial statements and financial disclosures and discuss them with management and the outside auditor—the review to include discussing (i) the Company’s critical accounting policies; (ii) management judgments and accounting estimates; (iii) alternative GAAP treatments; (iv) off-balance sheet arrangements and (v) material communications between the outside auditor, such as the management letter; (3) must evaluate and oversee internal control over financial reporting and disclosure controls and procedures, and review management’s and the outside auditor’s reports on internal controls; and (4) establish complaint review procedures concerning accounting, internal accounting controls and auditing matters and establish a mechanism for anonymous submissions by employees of accounting or auditing concerns. Under SEC rules, the audit committee must pre-approve any non-audit service permitted to be provided by the outside auditor. There are also specified requirements for the audit committee charter, and specified cure periods for audit committee composition requirements.
Under Nasdaq rules and the Sarbanes-Oxley Act, the Company’s audit committee must establish certain complaint procedures, sometimes called whistleblower procedures. We recommend these procedures be recorded in a written document and distributed to employees or posted in common areas. Typical procedures often include toll-free anonymous telephone hotlines, intranet complaint mailboxes and/or the opportunity to write to a designated recipient for complaints. The procedures usually provide for how complaints will be screened and investigated, retention of complaints, and how corrective action will be determined. The Company may not retaliate against persons who make complaints in good faith.

Review of related person transactions: The audit committee or another independent body of the Board of Directors must review and oversee all “related person transactions,” as defined in SEC Regulation S-K, Item 404 (which broadly covers relationships between the Company and any director, executive officer, 5% stockholder or any of their immediate family members). Under SEC rules, the Company’s policies and procedures regarding approval of related person transactions must be disclosed in the annual proxy statement.

Codes of conduct must be adopted and disclosed: Each issuer must adopt a code of ethics for the CEO and senior financial officers (a Sarbanes-Oxley and SEC requirement) and a code of business conduct and ethics for all directors, officers and employees (a Nasdaq requirement), which must be publicly available. Waivers to the code of conduct for executive officers or directors can only be granted by the issuer's board and must be disclosed, along with the reasons for the waiver, on Form 8-K or, if announced in advance, on the Company’s website. The form of the code of ethics varies greatly from company to company.

Stockholder approval of equity compensation plans: Stockholder approval is required of most equity compensation plans, including plans in which insiders do not participate, as well as repricings (if not provided for in the original plan) and material amendments that increase benefits to participants.

C. Other Requirements.

Because the Company’s Common Stock is registered under the Exchange Act, the Company and its executive officers and directors are subject to additional requirements under the securities laws. The principal requirements are as follows:

1. Short-Swing Profit Recapture.

There are special provisions regarding so-called “short-swing profits” which apply to every director and officer of the Company, as well as any beneficial owner of more than 10% of the outstanding Common Stock (an “insider”). Subject to certain exceptions, Section 16(b) of the Exchange Act provides that any profit realized on a purchase and sale of stock beneficially owned by an insider within a six-month period is recoverable by the Company. Although it is the individual director or officer’s responsibility to avoid short-swing profit recapture, because mistakes are so calamitous, most companies establish internal clearance procedures to minimize the chance of mistakes.

For this purpose, it does not matter whether the purchase or the sale occurs first. It is not necessary for the same shares to be involved in each of the matched transactions. Losses cannot be offset against gains. Transactions are generally paired so as to match the lowest purchase price and the highest sale price within a six-month period.
Good faith on the part of the insider is no defense. If the Company itself does not press a claim, a claim for recovery of the profit may be asserted by any stockholder for the benefit of the Company. Section 16 short-swing profit recapture is enforced by a group of securities lawyers who make their living by discovering and prosecuting short-swing trading violations.

There are many types of transactions which constitute a “purchase” or a “sale” for this purpose in addition to transactions, such as those on the open market, which are commonly thought to involve purchases or sales of securities. Transactions in derivatives may be deemed to involve purchases and sales of the underlying security. Changes to certain terms of a security may be considered to be a purchase or repurchase of the security. Corporate reorganizations and acquisitions may be deemed to involve “purchases” or “sales.” Even the receipt of a stock option from the Company may be deemed a purchase unless it is approved in the proper manner in accordance with SEC rules.

“Beneficial” ownership for this purpose may include indirect ownership of stock through partnerships, corporations, trusts or estates. In some circumstances, stock held by close relatives of a person may be considered to be owned beneficially by such person, and a purchase (or sale) by one individual may be matchable with a sale (or purchase) by his or her close relative to produce a recoverable profit. The provisions also apply to stock registered in a street name.

The short-swing profit recapture provisions require a great deal of advance planning. In addition, the rules are complex, may vary in their impact on different individuals, and often change. Insiders should always check with counsel before engaging in transactions in the Company’s securities. (See discussion of Forms 3, 4 and 5 under Section I.A.8 above.)

The Exchange Act also prohibits the Company’s directors, officers and 10% stockholders from making “short sales” of any equity security of the Company (regardless of whether that class is itself registered). “Short sales” are sales of securities which the seller does not own at the time or, if owned, securities that will not be delivered currently.

A more detailed memorandum discussing certain of the obligations set forth above is attached hereto as Exhibit C.

The Foreign Corrupt Practices Act ("FCPA") imposes on public companies certain substantive requirements designed to maintain the basic integrity of their internal recordkeeping and control systems. Under the present requirements, it is possible to violate provisions of the FCPA by the lack of adequate records or controls, even if no improper transactions have occurred as a result of such deficiencies and even if published financial statements are not inaccurate. The Company should consult with its public accountants to be sure that its systems for maintaining books and records meet FCPA requirements.

Two additional rules have been adopted by the SEC to supplement the FCPA statutory provisions. One rule prohibits any person from directly or indirectly falsifying or causing to be falsified any book, record or account subject to the FCPA provisions. This rule applies, as indicated, to any person and is not limited to directors or officers. A second rule prohibits directors and officers from making, directly or indirectly, any materially false, misleading or incomplete statement to an accountant in connection with an audit or any filing with the SEC.
In addition to the foregoing, the FCPA contains other provisions which prohibit payments or promises under certain circumstances to foreign governments, foreign officials, or other persons known to be conduits to such recipients.

3. Disclosure Relating to Contests for Control.

The so-called Williams Act provisions of the Exchange Act (dealing with, among other things, the manner in which possible tender offers for the Company’s registered securities may be made and the ways in which management may resist a tender offer) and the rules relating to proxy contests for control of a company are very complex and are not discussed in this memorandum. Generally, persons making tender offers or owning beneficially more than 5% percent of the outstanding stock are required to file certain disclosure documents under Section 14 of the Exchange Act, Schedules 13G or 13D, as discussed above, and to comply with other substantive requirements.

4. Insider Trading and Securities Fraud Enforcement Act of 1988 ("ITSFEA").

In addition to the penalties imposed on persons who commit insider trading, insiders or “controlling persons” who fail to take adequate steps to prevent insider trading by those whom they control may be liable for harsh civil penalties under ITSFEA. Even where the controlling person does not participate in the trading violation or profit from it, he or she may be liable for criminal fines of up to $1 million and civil fines of three times the amount of the profit gained or loss avoided as a result of the controlled person’s violation.

The term “controlling person” in the insider trading context is not limited to employers, but includes any person with power to influence or control the direction or the management, policies or activities of another person. For example, an officer or director of the Company may be considered a control person and thus become liable for insider trading committed by a person under his or her control.

Liability may occur if the controlling person:

- fails to take appropriate action once aware of the fact, or recklessly disregards circumstances indicating a likelihood that a controlled person was engaged in or was about to engage in an ongoing insider trading violation; or

- fails to take appropriate action once aware of the fact, or recklessly disregards circumstances indicating a likelihood, that a control person was engaged in or was about to engage in a tipping violation.

To impose liability, the SEC must establish that a controlling person objectively disregarded a risk that a controlled person was engaged in violations of the insider trading laws. Such “reckless disregard” must constitute a gross deviation from a reasonable person standard of care.

In response to the concerns raised by ITSFEA, public companies must establish written policies to curtail insider trading violations. A suggested Policy Regarding Insider Trading, as well as Black-Out Period Procedures, are Attachment A and Attachment B, respectively, to the attached memorandum on Implementing Procedures Designed to Prevent Insider Trading (Exhibit E).
5. Market Repurchases.

Repurchases by the Company of its outstanding Common Stock are subject to a series of technical restrictions under Regulation M, Rule 102 and Rule 10b-18 under the Exchange Act. The antifraud provisions under the Exchange Act apply to such purchases. Finally, disclosures of repurchases by the Company (including exercises of options paid for with Company stock) are required in Forms 10-K and 10-Q. Accordingly, counsel should be consulted in advance of any purchase of outstanding Common Stock by the Company, and internal clearance procedures should be followed in advance of any market purchase (or sales while the Company is making repurchases) by any officer or director.

II. OTHER NASDAQ REQUIREMENTS

A. Required Reports and Filings.

1. Notice Requirements.

In addition to the governance obligations discussed above, Nasdaq has certain notice requirements, including notices of: listing of additional shares; dividends; change in number of outstanding shares (5% or more); and change in auditors, transfer agent or registrar.

2. Disclosure Provisions.

Separate from the Company’s SEC disclosure obligations, Nasdaq requires listed companies to establish and follow the practice of prompt and complete disclosure of material developments which, if known, might reasonably be expected to influence the market price of the Company’s Common Stock. In particular, the Company should exercise great care in the preparation of press releases.

The Nasdaq requires Nasdaq-listed companies to disclose promptly to the public through any Regulation FD-compliant method (i.e., press release, Form 8-K or, subject to certain conditions, website posting) any material information which may affect the value of their securities or influence investors’ decisions. The Company should electronically notify Nasdaq MarketWatch no later than 10 minutes before release of material news to the public. Pending public disclosure of material information, Nasdaq may impose a trading halt on the Company’s securities. A trading halt normally lasts no longer than 30 minutes after the appearance of the news on wire services, but it may last longer if a determination is made that the news has not been adequately disseminated. If news is released after market close, companies should wait until at least 4:05 p.m. ET.

B. Maintenance Standards.

In order to remain listed, a company must continue to maintain certain listing standards. These standards relate to: stock price; market capitalization of total assets/revenues; public float; number of stockholders; number of market makers; and continued compliance with the governance requirements.
III. INSIDE INFORMATION

1. General.

In addition to the formal disclosure requirements imposed by the SEC forms discussed above, the Company is also subject to obligations relating to informal communications, such as press releases and communications with analysts and the news media. These obligations are governed by antifraud principles developed by the courts and by the rules of the SEC and Nasdaq. These rules are intended to keep the securities markets and stockholders informed of material developments, both favorable and unfavorable, concerning the Company’s affairs without favoring any special person or group. Subject to the issues raised in the discussion below, the Company should establish and follow a general practice of prompt and complete disclosure of material developments. Care must be taken to avoid inaccurate, incomplete or misleading disclosure. In particular, the Company should exercise great care in the preparation of press releases and in disclosures to analysts and news reporters.

Generally, information is material if there is a substantial likelihood that a reasonable investor would consider the information important in deciding whether to buy, sell, or hold, or how to vote, his or her shares, or would view it as having significantly altered the “total mix” of available information concerning the Company. If information might reasonably be expected to affect the market price of the stock of the Company, it will generally meet this definition of materiality. Assessments of materiality will generally require a balancing of both the probability that an event will occur and the anticipated magnitude of the event if it does occur.

Ordinarily, immediate disclosure is required when information becomes material. Occasionally, however, circumstances arise in which the Company may temporarily refrain from publicly disclosing material information, provided that complete confidentiality is maintained. The circumstances where disclosure may be withheld are limited and constitute an infrequent exception to the normal requirement of immediate public disclosure.

One exception is when disclosure would prejudice the ability of the Company to pursue its corporate objectives, a delay in disclosure may often be justified until the danger has subsided. If the unfavorable result to the Company outweighs the undesirable consequences of nondisclosure, disclosure may properly be deferred to a more appropriate time. The foregoing refers only to general disclosure requirements; all material information must be contained in the Company’s periodic reports under the Exchange Act regardless of these other factors if it is necessary to make the information required by such reports not misleading; it is understood, however, that the likelihood of an event happening is always a consideration in determining its materiality.

Another exception is when disclosure of uncertain developments may be premature when facts are in a state of flux. Matters that are or may develop into material corporate events also frequently require discussion and study by Company officials before final decisions can be made. Such premature disclosure could risk liability for misleading investors if an anticipated event does not occur. Also, successive announcements concerning the same subject but based on changing facts may confuse or mislead, rather than enlighten, the public. Consequently, if the situation is about to stabilize or resolve itself in the imminent future, it may be proper to withhold public announcement until a firm and complete announcement may be made, provided that the confidentiality of the matter can be maintained. Preparatory arrangements for acquisitions are an example of a type of a development where the risk of untimely and inadvertent disclosure of corporate plans is most likely to occur. Premature public announcement may properly be avoided only where it is possible to confine formal or informal discussions to a small group of the senior officers and their individual confidential advisers, but extreme care should be used to keep the information confidential.

Also, immediate public disclosure of material information should be made if the Company learns that insider trading has taken or is taking place while such material information is being temporarily withheld. The Company should be prepared to make an immediate public announcement if unusual market activity occurs, or when there has been a “leak,” or selective disclosure of such information to outsiders. Whenever material information is being temporarily withheld, market activity in the Company’s securities should be closely watched, since unusual market activity frequently signifies that a leak may have occurred.

Where the Company has made a previous public announcement which is still reasonably current and on which security holders could reasonably rely, but which is no longer accurate because of subsequent developments, or which was found to have been erroneous at the time of initial disclosure, or where there is a rumor or a market report circulating for which Company personnel had some responsibility, the Company may also be required to make corrective disclosure. It should be noted that confirmation of previously issued earnings guidance is itself material.

2. Responding to Inquiries.

The Company may occasionally receive inquiries from the press, financial analysts or Nasdaq seeking comment on rumors or unusual market activity, or an inquiry as to matters as to which the Company has determined disclosure is premature or otherwise inappropriate as discussed above. As a general matter, the Company should consistently respond to such inquiries with a “no comment” response, unless there is otherwise a duty to disclose as discussed above. The Company should use those two words – “no comment” -- and say nothing else except that it is the Company’s policy (assuming that to be the case) not to comment on rumors and similar matters. Further responses to those inquiries raise several risks, including triggering a duty to update, and commenting incorrectly because of lack of complete information. Also, commenting on the accuracy of some rumors may give rise to an obligation to comment on all rumors, which could put the Company in a position of continuously having to make premature disclosure of material developments. A deceptive response should never be given in response to these inquiries.

3. Disclosure Procedures.

The normal method of publication of important corporate data is by means of a press release, though other methods may be utilized. Any release of information that could reasonably be expected to have an impact on the market for the Company’s securities should be given to the wire services and the press “FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE.” News which ought to be the subject of immediate publicity must be released by the fastest available means.

Similarly, release of such news exclusively to the local press would not be sufficient for adequate and prompt disclosure to the investing public. To ensure adequate coverage, releases requiring immediate publicity should be given to Dow Jones & Company, Inc. and to other national newswire services -- Associated Press, Reuters, etc.

As stated above, Nasdaq recommends that companies notify it of the release of any material information no later than 10 minutes before its release to the public through the press. Notification must be electronically provided directly to the Nasdaq MarketWatch. The link to Nasdaq MarketWatch can be found here: https://www.nasdaq.net/ED/IssuerEntry.aspx.

The foregoing guidelines for distribution of releases should be regarded as minimum standards. Many companies may wish to give even broader prompt distribution to their releases. The Company should consider disseminating news in media in its major business locations, as well as newspapers and trade publications. Some of these media may refuse to publish information given by telephone until it has been confirmed in writing, or may require written confirmation after its publication.

Annual and quarterly earnings, dividend announcements, acquisitions, mergers, tender offers, stock splits and major management changes are examples of news items that should be handled on an immediate release basis. News of major contract awards, expansion plans and discoveries fall into the same category. Unfavorable news should be reported as promptly and candidly as favorable news. Reluctance or unwillingness to release a negative story or an attempt to disguise unfavorable news endangers management’s reputation for integrity. (Any changes in accounting methods to mask such occurrences can have a similar long-term impact.) The following guidelines for overseeing the preparation of press releases and other public announcements should help to ensure that the content of such announcements will meet these requirements:

- Every press release and other public announcement should be either prepared or reviewed both by an official of the Company having familiarity with the matter about which disclosure is to be made, and by the Company’s Disclosure Committee or other designated officers. An exception to this procedure might apply to routine personnel announcements.

- Review by outside legal counsel of press releases and other public announcements is usually necessary, depending on the importance and complexity of the announcement.

- The Company should coordinate statements issued by marketing, public relations and investor relations personnel and agents to ensure consistency and accuracy and compliance with legal rules and company policies.

In view of the importance of confidentiality and nondisclosure and the potential difficulties involved, a periodic review should be made of the manner in which confidential information is being handled within the Company. A periodic reminder notice of the Company’s policy to those in sensitive areas might also be helpful.

Whenever the Company plans to issue a press release, counsel should be consulted beforehand as to whether or not the press release should be furnished to the SEC on Form 8-K. As discussed above, the scope of developments that are required to be reported on Form 8-K is expansive. Even where a Form 8-K is not technically required, good corporate practice may nevertheless dictate a filing. In addition, companies should consider posting the information on their websites simultaneously with its release to help establish their websites as recognized channels of distribution.
B. Discussions with Analysts and Other Outside Persons by Management.

As a general matter, the SEC and Nasdaq encourage corporations to seek formal and informal contacts with analysts and others, and generally to maintain an open-door policy. However, potential liability may arise from these communications in several ways. First, selective disclosure of internal information to one or more persons that is not provided to the market generally may be deemed a “tip,” exposing the Company and the recipient to potential liability to investors who did not immediately receive the benefits of such information. Second, the information disclosed may, with hindsight, be deemed premature, false or misleading. Finally, the information disclosed may trigger a duty to make further public disclosure.

The basic rule for Company officers, when dealing with the press, financial analysts and other members of the investment community, is that no item of previously undisclosed material corporate information should be divulged or discussed unless and until it has been disclosed formally to the public by a general press release or Form 8-K. Often, in addition, a public access conference call is announced and scheduled with respect to such information and the information is posted on the company’s website. The Company should carefully review and monitor statements made at both group meetings and “one-on-one” sessions to ensure that no selective disclosure of material inside information is made. Private “guidance” to a limited group of analysts is not permissible. In the event of an inadvertent disclosure, immediate public disclosure must be made.

Estimates of future earnings or revenues are particularly sensitive. Estimates should be phrased in ranges or in non-specific terms. The assumptions underlying such estimates should be discussed. If a Company forecast is disclosed, the Company should consider updating the forecast if and when it determines either that it will likely not be met, or that it will likely be exceeded.

Although selective disclosure of material inside information has always been illegal, the adoption by the SEC in 2000 of its Regulation FD nevertheless radically changed the relationship between public companies and analysts and the extent and timing of disclosure by public companies. Formerly, a “cat and mouse” game was played between the company and its analysts such that the company would “hint” about purportedly inside information without actually disclosing it. That practice has ended, and the corollary is that in order to feed the market’s appetite for information, companies now disclose far more information than they once did, particularly “forward-looking information.” When they disclose this information, they must take care to make sure it is simultaneously disclosed in a broad and concurrent manner. A number of techniques evolved to make sure the playing field is level. For example, the practice of openly webcasting a company’s quarterly earnings teleconferences has developed, accompanied by posting on the company’s website of financial and other information likely to be discussed during the teleconference and the publication of a press release containing all material information along with the furnishing of a Form 8-K.

Whenever any forward-looking statement such as an estimate of future earnings is made, whether written or oral, there are additional technical requirements that should be followed in order to protect the Company. Such statements should (i) be identified as a forward-looking statement, and (ii) be accompanied by meaningful cautionary statements identifying important factors that could cause actual results to differ materially from those in the forward-looking statement. As an alternative to clause (ii) above, an oral forward-looking statement may be accompanied by a statement that (a) actual results might differ materially from those projected in the forward-looking statement, and (b) additional information concerning factors that could cause actual results to materially differ from those in such forward-looking statement is contained in a readily available written document, or portion thereof, such document or portions thereof being identified, and (c) such document or portions thereof actually satisfy the requirements of clause (ii) above. This litany should be recited before all conference calls or other public presentations.

The Company’s management may frequently be asked by financial analysts to comment on estimates made by such analysts with respect to a future period or periods. Practice has changed in this regard, and such comments should not be made.

Corrections may be made to non-financial factual assumptions or other statements proposed to be made by analysts to the extent that such corrections do not involve any new material undisclosed information. However, prior financial information or projections should not be reaffirmed, even if they have not changed from prior public disclosure, in any nonpublic forum.

The authority to deal with the investment community in general should rest solely with one or more designated officers. Similarly, those designated officers should bear the responsibility, along with the Disclosure Committee, for reviewing texts or outlines of speeches in advance to ensure, among other things, that they are not misleading and do not contain any material undisclosed information. Formal procedures should be established by the Company to ensure that its officers, directors and employees are aware of the Company’s disclosure policies and the need to preserve confidentiality for “Company Confidential” information. Generally, there should be limitations on the number and type of persons within the Company who are entitled to receive non-public material information.

A short memorandum of each meeting or conversation with financial analysts or other members of the investment community, stating the names of the persons involved, the date of the meeting or conversation and the items discussed should be prepared and retained for at least one year.

The requirement that disclosure be accurate and complete applies not only to press releases and statements to financial analysts, but to all Company statements that can reasonably be expected to reach investors. Such statements can often include speeches and statements touting new facilities and programs, even if the intended primary audience is not the securities markets.

C. Trading in the Company’s Stock by Insiders on the Basis of Undisclosed Inside Information.

Section 10(b) of the Exchange Act (which is applicable to all purchases and sales of securities) prohibits trading by insiders of a company in that company’s securities on the basis of undisclosed material information. For this purpose, insiders include the Company’s employees, officers, directors, controlling stockholders, attorneys, accountants, investment bankers, public relations and advertising firms, other consultants and immediate family members of such persons. For example, if an “insider” who was aware of the fact that the Company was about to receive a major order which would have a material effect upon the financial position of the Company were to purchase securities of the Company before that information had been publicly disseminated, he or she would be in violation of this rule and would be subject to criminal prosecution as well as civil liability for any profits gained or deemed gains on the basis of that inside information.
Similarly, if such person were aware of adverse information concerning the Company (such as the loss of a large customer) which had not been made public, he or she would be precluded from selling securities of the Company until such information had been disseminated to the public. Around the time that material corporate developments are unfolding, insiders must be careful about the timing of their trades in the Company’s stock.

Trading before the information is released may constitute fraud if it can be proven that the insider had an unfair informational advantage or made the transaction on the basis of the inside information. How soon after the release of material information insiders may begin to trade depends on how quickly and thoroughly the information is published by the news-wire services and the press.

In addition, insiders should refrain from trading even following dissemination of sensitive information until the public has had an opportunity to evaluate the information thoroughly. Where the impact of the information on investment decisions is readily understandable, as in the case of an earnings report, a 48-hour waiting period should be observed. A longer period may be observed if the information does not receive wide distribution or is complex in nature.

This prohibition on trading in securities of the Company applies not only to officers, directors and employees, but may in some situations also apply to any person who engages in any such trading on the basis of information that officers, directors, employees or other insiders have provided (these persons are called “Tippees”). Not only may a Tippee be found to have violated the law, but the person giving the tip may be held personally liable for any profits realized by his or her Tippee, even though he or she realized no personal profit. Accordingly, no transaction involving the Company’s securities should be initiated by any person, whether a Company employee or not, who is in possession of inside material information, favorable or unfavorable.

A suggested Policy Regarding Insider Trading as well as Black-Out Period Procedures, are attached as Attachment A and Attachment B, respectively, to the Memorandum on Implementing Procedures Designed to Prevent Insider Trading attached as Exhibit E hereto.

Because the restrictions on insider trading are so stringent, and because potential liability is often asserted with the benefit of hindsight, the SEC adopted Rule 10b5-1. This rule creates a “safe harbor” for insider trading under specified circumstances. Rule 10b5-1 provides an affirmative defense to insider trading charges for trades made pursuant to a pre-existing plan, contract or instruction adopted while the person was not aware of material non-public information – a so-called “10b5-1 Plan.” These plans are usually implemented through an insider’s brokerage firm, but the Company should be involved in the process and kept up to date with respect to sales and prospective sales under the plan. Note that 10b5-1 Plans do not relieve an insider of his or her duty to file Form 4s or Form 144s or potential liability for short-swing profits. In addition, these plans have been under increased scrutiny by the press and investors.

IV. PROCEDURES FOR RESALES OF UNREGISTERED STOCK - RULE 144 AND RULE 701

Stock acquired in private transactions (i.e., all securities acquired by the Company’s stockholders prior to its IPO or in private placements since then, including PIPE transactions where registration of re-sales has not yet occurred) are designated “restricted securities” under Rule 144 of the Securities Act. Restricted securities and other securities acquired in the open market by “controlling persons” (also called affiliates) of the Company (e.g., directors, executive officers, or 10% stockholders) are also deemed to be “restricted.” Restricted securities cannot be sold via the public market except pursuant to Rule 144, Rule 701, a registration statement under the Securities Act or another exemption under the Securities Act.

Rule 144 is a “safe harbor” exemption. To utilize this safe harbor, a seller is prohibited from selling restricted securities until (1) the ninety-first day following the effective date of the Company’s IPO; and (2) at least six months have elapsed since the specific shares were acquired from the Company or an affiliate of the Company and fully paid for. Such sales are subject to the quantitative and qualitative restrictions described below. Restricted securities held by persons other than affiliates for longer than one year, however, may be freely sold without restrictions. Similarly, unrestricted securities (i.e., registered securities acquired in the public market or pursuant to a registration statement) held by non-affiliates may be sold without restriction. Conversely, securities held by affiliates, whether restricted or unrestricted, and even if acquired in the public market, must be sold pursuant to Rule 144 or another exemption from registration. These restrictions on insiders are in addition to the short-swing profit and insider trading rules and company policies discussed above.

Securities held between six months and one-year by non-affiliates may be sold freely, subject only to the Company being current in its reporting obligations to the SEC at the time of the sale (i.e., having filed its annual and quarterly reports over the last 12 months).

For affiliates, the qualitative restrictions generally require that the sale be handled as a routine open market brokerage transaction, although the seller also may deal directly with an over-the-counter market maker that deals as a principal for its own account rather than as a broker. Also, the Company must be current in its reporting obligations to the SEC at the time of the sale. The quantitative restrictions limit sales by the holder during each three-month period to an amount of securities equal to the greater of:

1. one percent of the number of shares of Common Stock outstanding (based upon the Company’s presently outstanding shares) (or, in the case of debt securities, ten percent of the applicable tranche); or
2. the average reported weekly trading volume during the four calendar weeks preceding the date placing the order to sell.

Thus, the amount of shares permitted to be sold in any three-month period by each Rule 144 seller to whom the quantitative limitations apply would be at least one percent of the number of shares of Common Stock outstanding, but the amount which could be sold would be larger if the notice of sale is filed at a time when the weekly trading average during the preceding four calendar weeks exceeded that number.

Sales by closely-related persons, such as spouses, parents, minor children and their trusts, donors and donees, and pledgors and pledgees, must be combined, as specifically provided by Rule 144, in applying the quantitative limitation, with sales made by the actual Rule 144 seller.

The affiliate selling in reliance on Rule 144 must file a notice with the SEC (with a copy sent to Nasdaq) on Form 144 if equity securities are sold. A copy of Form 144 can be found at www.sec.gov/about/forms/secforms.htm. The Form 144 must be transmitted to the SEC, with a copy to Nasdaq, concurrently with placing the order for sale – that is, the Form 144 can be mailed (or filed via EDGAR) to the SEC when the sell order is placed. There is an exemption from the filing requirement for transactions during any three-month period which do not exceed either 5,000 shares or an aggregate sale price of $50,000. If the sales are not completed within 90 days, a new Form 144 must be filed if additional sales are to be made. The filing of Form 144 is in addition to the requirement that officers, directors and 10% stockholders also file the requisite Form 4 under Section 16(a) of the Exchange Act within two business days (see discussion of Form 4 under Section I.A.8 above).

The foregoing is an extremely simplified summary of very complex and detailed provisions which may vary in their impact on individual stockholders. Well in advance of any proposed sale, a controlling person or holder of restricted securities should seek specific advice relating to his or her individual circumstances before committing to make any public sale of the Company’s Common Stock or other securities.

The preceding discussion relates solely to an exemption from the registration requirements of the Securities Act for unregistered shares acquired in private transactions and to any shares acquired in public transactions by affiliates or “insiders” (that is, directors, officers or 10% stockholders). Whether or not registration is required with respect to any given proposed sale, the antifraud provisions remain applicable. Thus, even if Rule 144 provides an exemption from Securities Act registration, no stockholder should make any public sale of any stock if he or she is then aware of material information about the Company which has not yet been publicly disclosed. In connection with Rule 144 sales, an affiliate seller will normally have to furnish the broker with a completed questionnaire or representation letter. A broker’s letter and a copy of the Form 144 intended to be used and some information from the selling affiliate stockholder must then be furnished to the Company’s counsel, who is required, in turn, to furnish the transfer agent with an opinion letter authorizing the transfer. Generally, when Rule 144 sales are proposed, the Company’s counsel will be required to furnish any necessary assistance.

An exemption from the registration requirements under Rule 144 does not have any bearing on the exposure to short-swing profit recapture under Section 16(b) of the Exchange Act, as discussed above. Thus, an exempt sale under Rule 144 may result in a short-swing profit recoverable by the Company under Section 16(b) if the sale occurs within six months before or after the seller’s purchase of any Company stock at a lower price.

A registration statement on Form S-8 should be filed by the Company to cover the offer and sale of the Company’s Common Stock pursuant to the Company’s stock option plan. Pursuant to Rule 701, however, shares held by non-affiliates that were acquired pursuant to the exercise of stock options prior to the Company’s IPO may generally be sold without restriction commencing on the ninety-first day following the effective date of the Company’s IPO, subject to any applicable underwriters’ lock-up agreements. The holding period of Rule 144 does not apply to any shares sold under Rule 701.

V. THE MOST PAINFUL MISTAKES BY PUBLIC COMPANIES AND THEIR OFFICERS

The breadth and complexity of the public securities laws and Nasdaq regulations, particularly after Sarbanes-Oxley, have made it extremely difficult for public company officers to keep in mind the myriad of requirements applicable to them. Counsel should be consulted in advance with respect to any significant activity or disclosure. If all of the rules are impossible to keep in mind all of the time, the following situations should always ring alarm bells:
• When selling or buying stock, or engaging in a transaction of any kind relating to the Company’s stock, make certain that there will be no “short-swing” violation.

• When selling or buying stock, make certain that counsel advises as to potential violations of the insider trading rules.

• Be circumspect at all times in talking about the Company to friends, acquaintances and, most importantly, investment professionals or the press.

• If you are contemplating an offering, make sure that no planned activities, such as scheduled press interviews or speeches, will implicate the “gun-jumping” rules that say that such activities may be an illegal offering of the securities before they are registered.

• Be sure to regularly check the Company’s SEC reporting calendar to be sure deadlines and compliance requirements are met.

Assume that anything of importance that happens to the Company and every material transaction may require immediate reporting under the new Form 8-K rules and/or a press release.

Summary SEC Compliance Checklist
SUMMARY SEC COMPLIANCE CHECKLIST

The following checklist is meant to help organize and simplify the complicated task of ensuring that the Company has addressed the myriad of requirements described in the firm’s Public Company Compliance Manual. The checklist is summary in nature and assumes that the reader has read and understands the manual. It does not explain the requirements but merely lists them. It is not intended to be a substitute for organizing a compliance program in consultation with counsel. The list assumes that the Company is a domestic U.S. issuer listed on Nasdaq, but attempts to identify the source of the requirements. The symbol □ indicates a Nasdaq requirement, the symbol ◊ indicates an SEC requirement and the symbol ∗ indicates recommended compliance.

The list is divided into the following broad categories:

I. Board of Directors and Committee Requirements
II. Disclosure Requirements and Certifications
III. Insider Trading
IV. Miscellaneous

I. BOARD OF DIRECTORS AND COMMITTEE REQUIREMENTS

□ Majority of the Board of Directors must be “independent.” The Board must determine whether the Company meets the requirements. The Board’s determination must be reported in the proxy statement. When entering into transactions or arrangements with Board members, determine whether they will affect independence. The Company’s annual Directors and Officers Questionnaire should elicit information regarding independence.

□ Independent directors must meet in executive session at least twice a year.

◊ Company loans to directors and executive officers are prohibited. All such loans must be repaid. Examine whether any other Company benefits constitute prohibited loans (e.g., personal use of firm credit cards, split dollar life insurance, prepaid signing bonuses, etc.).

□ Board must establish an Audit Committee composed solely of at least three independent directors.

□ Board must establish a Compensation Committee composed solely of at least two independent directors.

□ Board may consider establishing an independent Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. Disclosures will be necessary about the existence or non-existence of this committee.

□ All committees should adopt charters and post them on Company website.

□ Committee duties should be specifically delegated to the Committee by the Board pursuant to an appropriate Board resolution, and the Board should approve the various committee charters (in addition to adoption by the committees). The Board must authorize sufficient funding for the Audit Committee and Compensation Committee to perform their functions, including retaining independent advisers if they choose to do so.

☐ Board must adopt a Code of Ethics for the CEO and CFO and a Code of Conduct for all directors, officers and employees (these may be combined). Distribute the code(s) to the relevant persons. File with the SEC and/or post on the Company’s website as required. File or post amendments and waivers for directors and executive officers.

☐ Company must disclose in proxy statement any process for security holders to send communications to the Board and any individual directors, as well as any screening process for such communications.

☐ Company must disclose in proxy statement (or website) any policy with regard to directors’ attendance at Company annual meetings of stockholders.

☐ Company must disclose in proxy statement any policy for review, approval or ratification of related person transactions (and should formally adopt such a policy).

☐ Audit Committee Composition:

☐ Must be composed of three independent directors under stricter qualification guidelines.

☐ One member must be a “financial expert”, as defined by Nasdaq rules. This must be certified to Nasdaq.

☐ Whether or not there is an “audit committee financial expert” under more stringent SEC rules and the identity of the expert must be disclosed in the proxy statement. An audit committee financial expert is not required under SEC rules, but if there isn’t one, then that fact must be noted and explained in the Form 10-K.

☐ Audit Committee Duties:

☐ Select, determine the compensation of and monitor the performance of the outside auditors; review independence of outside auditors. (Note extensive rules on conflicts that could cause auditors to not be independent.)

☐ Pre-approve any “non-audit service” to be provided by the outside auditor, or specify detailed pre-approval procedures and delegation to a member. (Note that certain non-audit services are prohibited.) Details are to be disclosed in the proxy statement/annual report.

☐ Review the Company’s annual and quarterly financial statements and financial disclosures and discuss them with management and the outside auditor—the review to include discussion of the auditor’s report on specified items, such as critical accounting policies.

☐ Evaluate and oversee internal control over financial reporting and disclosure controls and procedures, and review management’s and the outside auditor’s reports on internal controls.

☐ Establish complaint review procedures concerning accounting, internal accounting controls and auditing matters and establish a mechanism for anonymous submissions by employees of accounting or auditing concerns.

☐ Prepare report to be included in the Company’s proxy statement.
• The audit committee or another independent body of the Board of Directors must review and oversee all related person transactions.

☐ Compensation Committee Composition and Duties:

• The compensation committee should be comprised of at least two independent directors. The members should also satisfy the independence requirements under SEC Rule 16b-3.

• Must be composed of independent directors under stricter qualification guidelines.

• The compensation of the CEO and all other executive officers of the Company must be determined, or recommended to the Board for determination, by the compensation committee.

• The compensation committee must prepare its report to be included in the Company’s proxy statement, which requires that it say whether it has reviewed “Compensation Discussion and Analysis.”

• The compensation committee must establish a “clawback” policy for excess incentive pay following certain accounting restatements.

• The compensation committee must consider potential conflicts of interest when engaging consultants and send questionnaires to compensation advisors to help the committee evaluate potential conflicts.

☐ Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee Duties:

• Director nominees must either be selected, or recommended for the Board’s selection, either by a nominations committee comprised solely of independent directors or by a majority of the independent directors.

☐ Consider the following, which must be disclosed in the Company’s proxy statement (or in some cases an explanation why these don’t exist).

• Policy with regard to consideration of director candidates recommended by security holders.

• Procedures to be followed by security holders in recommending director candidates.

• Policy on director and employee hedging of Company stock.

• Specific, minimum qualifications that must be met by a nominating committee-recommended nominee; any specific qualities or skills necessary for a director to possess.

• Process for identifying and evaluating nominees and any differences in process for nominees recommended by security holders.

• Policy with regard to diversity (as defined by the Company since the SEC does not define) in the director nomination process.
II. DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS AND CERTIFICATIONS

V Ensure that the Company’s CEO, CFO and General Counsel (if any), as well as the Company’s Disclosure Committee, has received and read the Public Company Compliance Manual.

V The Board should appoint a Disclosure Committee to oversee the Company's disclosure policies and procedures. (Note that the SEC recommends that the committee include the Company’s principal accounting officer, the general counsel or other senior legal officer (if any), the principal risk management officer (if any), the chief investor relations officer (if any), and, if appropriate for the size and complexity of the Company, senior representative of business units.)

V Ensure that the Disclosure Committee has read and understood the reporting calendar appended to the Public Company Compliance Manual. The Disclosure Committee and outside counsel should meet at the beginning of the fiscal year to review the reporting calendar.

V Ensure that the Disclosure Committee is aware of the scope of events that must be immediately reported on Form 8-K. Note the list of triggering events is expansive. Note also material officer compensation changes and issues may need to be reported.

V The Disclosure Committee’s duties include: (i) ensuring that procedures are in place that are adequate to bring to the attention of the Disclosure Committee all reportable events; (ii) reviewing in advance all SEC filings; and (iii) reviewing in advance all press releases and other public disclosures. Consider the desirability of sub-certifications regarding SEC disclosures.

V Advise the Company’s CEO and CFO of their responsibility for designing and monitoring the effectiveness of the Company’s disclosure controls and procedures, including quarterly evaluations as of the end of each fiscal quarter.

V Ensure that controls are in place to limit the Company’s interaction with the press and financial analysts to specified Company officers.

V Ensure that procedures are in place to properly announce and hold earnings conference calls and to promptly furnish all earnings press releases under cover of Form 8-K. Sequence: press release announcing results and access to earnings conference call, furnish Form 8-K, hold earnings conference call. Remind Company spokesman on necessity for disclaimer of “forward-looking statements” and website with reconciliations of non-GAAP financial measures.

V Periodically remind the CEO and CFO of their obligation to furnish compliance certifications in the Form 10-K and Forms 10-Q. Ensure that the CEO and CFO carefully read all SEC filings in advance of filing.

V Adopt a disclosure policy and social media policy.

V If not already in place, advise the Company of the SEC’s requirements relating to internal control over financial reporting, including the requirement to establish and maintain a recognized control framework and to annually evaluate, and review quarterly, the adequacy of the internal controls. Advise of obligations to disclose material weaknesses or changes. Advise the CEO and CFO of the necessity and scope of their annual certifications relating to internal controls in the annual report.
Note requirement of the necessity of outside auditor’s attestation report on internal control over financial reporting and coordinate with auditors. Obtain Audit Committee pre-approval of auditor’s services, as necessary.

Ensure the Company is aware of the special SEC requirements and prohibitions relating to the use, announcement and publication of “non-GAAP” financial measures and the need to consult outside counsel with respect thereto.

For accelerated filers, post or link to SEC filings on Company website as soon as practicable after filing.

III. INSIDER TRADING

The Board of Directors must adopt an insider trading policy. The Board should consider adopting a policy regarding director and employee stock hedging.

Circulate to all employees the insider trading memoranda contained in the Public Company Compliance Manual, and ascertain that the Company has received back the acknowledgment form contained in those materials.

Circulate to all directors and executive officers the memorandum contained in the Public Company Compliance Manual relating to the “short-swing profits” provisions of Section 16 of the Exchange Act.

Determine that each officer and director has obtained the proper codes to permit electronic filing of the Forms 3 and 4.

Ascertain that all Company directors and officer have filed with the SEC a Form 3 initial report of beneficial ownership, and ascertain that the directors and officers are aware of the two-day Form 4 filing requirement relating to other transactions.

Establish a pre-clearance procedure with the Company’s CFO or other senior officer requiring officers and directors to advise that officer in advance of their intention to trade in the Company’s securities and the Company requirement for that officer to pre-clear any such trades.

Obtain from each officer and director a power of attorney running to the Company’s CFO and at least one other senior officer authorizing such persons to sign Forms 4 on behalf of the director or officer.

Ascertain that the Company has procedures in place to post Form 3 and Form 4 filings on its website within one day after the SEC filing. Also, all SEC filings should be accessible from the Company’s website.

Communicate with counsel regarding procedures for Rule 144 opinions.

IV. MISCELLANEOUS

All equity compensation plans, with very limited exceptions require stockholder approval. Material amendments to plans also require stockholder approval.

Consider need to establish a Qualified Legal Compliance Committee to receive attorney reports of evidence of material violations of law.

If necessary, adopt procedures regarding notifications of pension plan blackout periods.
V Consider creation of equity grant date/pricing policy.

V Consider establishing document retention/destruction program.

V Send out annual Directors and Officers questionnaires; adopts annual reporting timeline.

V Consider establishing director/officer resignation policy to ensure Form 8-K compliance.

V Evaluate website for proxy rule technical requirements, anti-fraud issues, Regulation FD utility.

V Consider establishing shareholder engagement policy or committee.

Schedule of Recurring Filing Dates and Events
ANNUAL EXCHANGE ACT REPORTING CALENDAR
(SEC REPORTING AND ANNUAL STOCKHOLDERS MEETING)
(FOR NON-ACCELERATED FILERS)

The following sample annual Exchange Act reporting calendar and time and responsibility schedule provides a starting point for creating a checklist tailored to the Company. This schedule is meant as an aid in each of: (a) the Exchange Act requirements and other federal securities law requirements; (b) state law requirements (the calendar assumes a company incorporated in Delaware); (c) the company’s charter, bylaws and other governance policies, and board committee charters; and (d) applicable Nasdaq standards. For simplicity, the calendar assumes a December 31 fiscal year end and a May 15th annual meeting date, and that no proposal to be considered at the annual meeting will require the filing of a preliminary proxy statement with the SEC. It also assumes the Company is not an accelerated filer – if it is an accelerated filer all activities relating to the Form 10-K and Forms 10-Q would be subject to shorter deadlines.

MEMORANDUM

To: Directors, Executive Officers and 10% Stockholders of Xyz, Inc.
From:
Date:
Re: Insider Reporting and Liability for Short-Swing Trading

All directors, executive officers and 10% stockholders ("Insiders") of Xyz, Inc. ("the "Company") are subject to the reporting and insider trading provisions of Section 16 ("Section 16") of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "Exchange Act"). This memorandum is intended to explain certain of your obligations under Section 16.

1. Overview.

Section 16 is intended to prevent unfair use of inside information and discourage speculative trading by Insiders by requiring them to report holdings and transactions in the Company’s securities (under Section 16(a)). In addition, Section 16 also requires Insiders to pay over to the Company any "profits" realized from any purchase and sale (or any sale and purchase) of Company securities within a six-month period (under Section 16(b)). Under Section 16(c), Insiders are precluded from making short sales (sales of shares they do not own at the time of the sale) of the Company’s securities.

Federal legislation has given the Securities and Exchange Commission (the "SEC") and courts far greater powers in sanctioning and imposing penalties for violations of the federal securities laws. In addition, the SEC requires that the Company disclose in its annual proxy statement the names of Insiders who have failed to make required Section 16 filings on a timely basis, and also to note the existence of such disclosure on the cover of its annual report on Form 10-K.

The rules under Section 16 are complex and contain a number of "gray" areas and potential traps for the unwary. You should consult with counsel before engaging in any transactions in the Company’s securities, particularly transactions involving "derivative" securities (such as options or warrants).

2. Your Reporting Obligations.

Section 16 requires you to file an initial statement of beneficial ownership of the Company’s securities on Form 3 at the time that you become subject to Section 16 (when you become an Insider), as well as periodic statements reflecting changes in beneficial ownership of the Company’s securities. Most changes in beneficial ownership (as defined below) must be reported. When you report and on what form you report depends on the type of transaction, and sometimes on whether or not you wish to report earlier than required. There are several relevant times when filings are required:

(a) An initial statement of beneficial ownership of equity securities on Form 3 must be filed by the date that the registration statement for the Company’s initial public offering becomes effective or, thereafter, within 10 days of the date a person becomes an Insider;
(b) most transactions must be reported on a Form 4 by the end (i.e., before 10 p.m. EST) of the 2nd business day following the date of the transaction;

(c) all other reportable transactions and holdings must be reported on Form 5 within 45 days of the Company’s fiscal year end, unless you voluntarily report the transaction or holding earlier on Form 4.

Certain transactions need not be separately reported (although their effect on an Insider’s holdings will ultimately be reflected).

Most transactions trigger an immediate Form 4 filing requirement, including generally many which may be matched to result in short-swing liability under Section 16(b). For example, the exercise of a stock option is, in most cases, exempt from Section 16(b) matching and therefore the exercise is not a transaction that may be matched against another transaction. However, because the decision by an Insider to exercise an option is deemed to be of interest to the marketplace, option exercises trigger an immediate filing on Form 4. As a practical matter, this means that only gifts, very small acquisitions and a few other specific transactions are reportable on Form 5.

Attached to this memo is a table of typical transactions you may encounter and when you must report them. Even though reporting of some transactions may be deferred, it is advisable to report all reportable transactions on a Form 4 at the time of the transaction because (i) it is possible that you may not recall the transaction when it is time to file the Form 5, and (ii) earlier reports may be required due to the timing of events. If you file a Form 4 for every reportable transaction, you will not be required to file a Form 5 at the end of the Company’s fiscal year. The table is intended to assist you with your preparation of Forms 4 and 5, but is not in any way intended to replace the advice of your personal attorney or advisor, with whom you should always consult before making any conclusions regarding your reporting obligations arising out of any transaction, including those listed in the chart.

3. How to Complete and File Forms.

(a) Completion of Forms. When you fill out the forms, read the instructions carefully to be sure that you have provided all of the information required, including the proper transaction codes.

For purposes of the information as to holdings and transactions required by the forms, your “beneficial ownership” in equity securities is defined to mean a direct or indirect pecuniary interest (i.e., ability to profit from purchases and sales) in securities. In determining the existence of a pecuniary interest which must be reported, there is a presumption that a person has a pecuniary interest in securities held by members of his or her immediate family if they share the same household. You are generally deemed to have a pecuniary interest in any shares held by your children through college and until they set up independent households. A person also is deemed to have a pecuniary interest in any securities that can be acquired on the exercise or conversion of any options, warrants, convertible securities or other “derivative securities,” whether or not presently exercisable, held by them. A person may also be held to be the beneficial owner of securities registered in the name of a partnership, corporation, trust or other entity over which he or she has a controlling influence. Finally, special rules exist for fiduciaries and beneficiaries of trusts and general partners of partnerships.
Forms 4 and 5 contain an “exit” box, which may be checked when you cease to be an Insider. Note, however, that you would still be required to report a transaction after you cease to be an executive officer or director, if the transaction (such as a sale) “matches” with any transaction (such as a non-exempt purchase) while you were an executive officer or director.

(b) Electronic Filing and Website Posting. In order to file a Form 3, 4 or 5 with the SEC, you must have “CIK” and “CCC” numbers which are used to access the SEC’s “EDGAR” system. These numbers can be obtained, usually within one or two days by electronically filing a short application called a Form ID (see www.sec.gov/about/forms/formid.pdf) followed up by a notarized fax of the application. If you have questions about obtaining EDGAR identification numbers, the Company or its counsel can assist you or go to the SEC’s EDGAR filer management website at www.filermanagement.edgarfiling.sec.gov. These numbers are unique to the individual filer and can be used to make filings by an Insider with respect to other companies for which he or she may serve as an insider. Each Insider should check with any such other companies to make sure they don’t already have EDGAR identification numbers.

Once an Insider has EDGAR identification numbers, he or she must electronically file each Form 3, 4 or 5 through the SEC’s website (see www.onlineforms.edgarfiling.sec.gov), with the Company’s or counsel’s assistance, or through a third party service provider that handles Section 16 filings. Electronic SEC filing will also be deemed delivery to Nasdaq.

A manually executed hard copy of the filing must be retained for at least five years. In addition, simultaneously with filing, a copy must be sent to the Company. The Company is required to post all Section 16 filings on its website by the business day after filing.

(c) Disclaimer of Beneficial Ownership. When there is doubt as to your beneficial ownership of securities, you should report such securities as being beneficially owned. Such report will not amount to an admission of beneficial ownership if accompanied by a disclaimer of beneficial ownership. If you wish to disclaim beneficial ownership of securities, you should make the disclaimer on your Form 3 and also in any Form 4 or 5 (discussed below) which you may subsequently file. An appropriate form of disclaimer is as follows:

The undersigned disclaims beneficial ownership of the securities indicated, and the reporting herein of such securities shall not be construed as an admission that the undersigned is the beneficial owner thereof for purposes of Section 16 or for any other purpose.

(d) When Due. Form 3s are due on the date the Company goes public or, thereafter, within 10 days of the date a person becomes an Insider.

Forms 4 (other than voluntary filings) must be filed on or before 10 p.m. EST on the 2nd business day after the date on which the reportable transaction occurred. A voluntary Form 4 may be filed at any time. In certain limited circumstances where an Insider would otherwise have not been aware of the trade (such as under a so-called “10b5-1” trading plan or under a benefit plan where an administrator executes the transaction), additional time (up to 3 days) may be available.

Form 5 is due within 45 days after the end of the Company’s fiscal year. If any transactions should have been reported earlier, the delinquent reports of those transactions must be included in the Form 5 and a special box must be checked indicating that reporting delinquencies have occurred. If all holdings and transactions have previously been reported, no Form 5 need be filed.

If the due date falls on a weekend or a national holiday, you have until the next business day to get the form to the SEC.

(e) Power of Attorney. A form may be executed using a power of attorney provided that a copy of the power of attorney is filed with the SEC (and a manually signed copy is retained for 5 years).

4. The Importance of Accurate and Timely Reporting.

Correct and timely reporting to the SEC is imperative. The Company is required each year to disclose to the public in its proxy statement the name of any Insider who has not met his or her SEC reporting obligations in a timely manner, even if a report was late by just one day. The existence of such disclosure will also be flagged on the cover of the Company’s annual report on Form 10-K. This would be embarrassing to you and the Company and possibly costly to you. The SEC has expressed its intention to use this information to take action under federal legislation that gives the SEC and courts new sanctions for violations of federal securities laws.

5. Avoiding Short-Swing Liability.

In addition to making complete and timely reports under Section 16(a), you must also be careful to plan transactions to avoid short-swing liability under Section 16(b).
Section 16(b) is designed to discourage trading on inside information, and presumes that certain people inevitably benefit from their “insider” status. Under Section 16(b), any purchase and sale, or sale and purchase, of a company’s securities by a company Insider made during any given six-month period will be matched. Any “profit”, whether inadvertent or intentional, realized by matching a purchase and sale within a six-month period is recoverable by the Company. If the Company fails to recover such profit, any stockholder of the Company may sue to recover it on behalf of the Company. Forms 3, 4 and 5 filed with the SEC are publicly available on the internet and are routinely monitored by attorneys who make their living by threatening to file Section 16(b) suits on behalf of stockholders.
In the event of a violation of Section 16(b) by an Insider, these attorneys are generally able to compel the Company and/or the offending Insider to pay their fees and expenses if the Company had not acted to obtain restitution of the deemed “profit” from the Insider prior to receiving a communication from the attorney.

Unlike other provisions in the federal securities laws, intent to take unfair advantage of non-public information is not required for recovery under Section 16(b). In other words, transactions in the Company’s securities within six months of one another can lead to recovery of profits irrespective of the reasons for or purposes of the transaction.

Except in the case of options and other derivative securities (for which there is a special rule for calculating profits), transactions are paired with mechanical rigidity so as to match the lowest purchase price with the highest sale price, thus squeezing out the maximum amount of “profit.” Thus, although you may have realized an economic loss, you may be treated for Section 16(b) purposes as having realized a “profit.”
Attached to this memo is a table of typical transactions and how they would be treated. It does not matter for Section 16(b) purposes whether the purchase or sale comes first. It makes no difference that the particular shares sold happen to be shares you have held more than six months, since it is not necessary for the same shares to be involved in each of the “matched” transactions. The rules apply not only to your individual transactions but also to transactions engaged in by others if you are deemed to have a pecuniary interest in their shares. Thus, a purchase by you could be matched with a sale of shares by your spouse. Public and private transactions also can be matched. In the case of officers and directors, transactions occurring while you are an Insider may be matched with transactions after you cease to be an Insider. A 10% beneficial owner must, however, be a 10% beneficial owner at both the time of purchase and the time of sale to trigger Section 16(b) matching liability.

The purchase and sale of securities that are convertible into or exercisable for the purchase of shares of Common Stock may be matched either against the sale and purchase of other securities which are so convertible or the sale and purchase of shares of Common Stock. For example, a sale of warrants to acquire Common Stock might be matched either against a purchase of convertible securities or a purchase of Common Stock within six months before or after such sale. The acquisition of warrants or convertible securities will also generally be treated as an acquisition of the underlying equity security, but the exercise of such warrant or conversion of such convertible securities will not be treated as a matchable purchase.

Any acquisition by an officer or director (but not a 10% holder) from the Company, or any disposition by an officer or director to the Company, is exempt from matching if approved in advance by the Board of Directors or a properly constituted committee of the Board. Thus, neither the grant nor the exercise of an option issued under the Company’s stock option plans will generally be treated as a matchable “purchase” for purposes of Section 16(b). Acquisitions of Common Stock under the Company’s employee stock purchase plans will not generally be treated as matchable purchases for purposes of Section 16(b). If the officer or director elects to pay the exercise price (and/or any tax withholding obligations) by withholding option shares or tendering previously held shares to the Company, the disposition of such shares will likewise be exempt from matching if properly approved in advance. However, the sale of shares by a broker to pay the exercise price and/or tax withholding would be treated as a matchable “sale” for purposes of Section 16(b).

In short, Section 16 contains many traps for the unwary. Thus, it is imperative that you consult with a knowledgeable adviser before executing any transactions.

6. Short Sales.

In general, Section 16(c) of the Exchange Act makes it unlawful for an Insider to make “short sales” or “sales against the box” when the securities sold are not delivered within the time periods set forth in Section 16(c). A “short sale” is any sale of a security which the seller does not own or any sale which is consummated by the delivery of a security borrowed by, or for the account of, the seller. A “sale against the box” is the type of short sale in which the seller actually owns sufficient shares to make delivery but chooses to borrow shares to cover the sale. The seller subsequently can either buy securities or use his own securities to repay the lender to complete the transaction.
7. Avoiding Liability Under Other Insider Trading Rules.

As discussed above, Section 16 is based on a presumption that certain people inevitably benefit from their access to inside information. Insiders should not forget that the Securities Exchange Act also prohibits the actual use of inside information, whether or not this involves six-month matching of purchase and sale transactions. In addition to the direct liability of Insiders for insider trading violations, companies and their directors and officers may also be legally liable for failing to prevent such violations by company personnel. In light of this potential indirect liability, and the severity of possible sanctions both to you and to the Company for insider trading violations, the Company’s policies and procedures set forth in its insider trading policy statement should be observed at all times.

8. Conclusion.

Remember that it is your responsibility to meet Section 16(a) reporting obligations and to avoid Section 16(b) short-swing profit liability. You should obtain assistance from your personal attorney or adviser prior to executing any transactions to avoid liability, determine what your reporting obligations are and to complete the necessary filings. While the primary responsibility for Section 16 compliance remains with you, your compliance is extremely important to the Company. The Company’s Section 16 compliance officer can provide you with the necessary forms and their instructions.

Memorandum on Implementing Procedures
Designed to Prevent Insider Trading
MEMORANDUM

To: The Officers and Directors of Xyz, Inc. (the "Company")

From:

Date:

Re: Implementing Procedures Designed to Prevent Insider Trading and Selective Disclosure of Material Non-Public Information

Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 generally prohibits trading on the basis of undisclosed material information. Under the Insider Trading and Securities Fraud Enforcement Act of 1988 (the “Insider Trading Act”), criminal fines and sentences and civil penalties can be assessed against individuals who trade on or “tip” inside information. The SEC may also impose a civil penalty on a company or the controlling persons of a company for failure to take appropriate steps to prevent the trading on or tipping of such information. Under the Insider Trading Act, a company or controlling person may be subject to a penalty equal to the greater of $1,000,000 or three times the profit made or the losses avoided by the person who traded based on such inside information.

In addition, the SEC's Regulation FD (“Reg. FD”) requires that whenever a “senior official” of the Company discloses material non-public information to market participants, it must simultaneously disclose that same information to the public. The term “senior official” includes all directors and executive officers, as well as any other officer, employee or agent who regularly communicates with market participants or stockholders.

To reduce the risk to the Company and its officers and directors of liability arising from insider trading or selective disclosure, the Company should adopt procedures designed to prevent the trading on or tipping of inside information and to govern the disclosure of material non-public information. These new procedures will replace and expand upon the Company’s existing procedures adopted before the Company’s initial public offering that were designed to prevent the trading on or tipping of inside information. This memorandum sets forth recommendations for a preventive program that includes (1) limiting the officers and other employees of the Company who are authorized to speak on behalf of the Company; (2) distributing a policy statement to employees of the Company setting forth the prohibition on insider trading and tipping and stressing the consequences of such activities both to the employee and the Company; and (3) enforcing the policies set forth in the policy statement through trading limitations, certification as to compliance, periodic reminders and general supervision.
INTRODUCTION

Insider Trading Act

Congress adopted the Insider Trading Act to strengthen enforcement of the prohibition against insider trading under Section 10(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and to impose more severe sanctions against those who engage in such trading. The Insider Trading Act applies to those who purchase or sell securities while in the possession of material non-public information. It also applies to those who communicate – or “tip” – such information in connection with any sale or purchase. The Insider Trading Act as recently amended by the Sarbanes-Oxley Act imposes a maximum criminal fine of $5,000,000 and a maximum prison sentence of twenty years on those who either trade on or tip inside information. Civil penalties of up to three times the profit gained or loss avoided as a result of such sale or purchase may be imposed on the trader and tipper.

In addition to sanctions against those who directly violate the prohibition on insider trading, the Insider Trading Act imposes a penalty on any person who directly or indirectly controlled the person who committed such violation if the controlling person knew or recklessly disregarded the fact that the controlled person was likely to engage in the acts that constituted the violation and failed to take preventive measures. The maximum penalty that may be imposed on a controlling person under the Insider Trading Act is the greater of $1,000,000 or three times the profit gained or loss avoided as a result of the violation. The term “controlling person,” while not specifically defined in the Insider Trading Act, may include the Company and its directors and executive officers with respect to insider trading by Company employees.

Regulation FD

Reg. FD generally requires that whenever a senior official of the Company intentionally discloses material non-public information about the Company to market participants and holders of the Company’s securities, the Company must simultaneously disclose that same information to the public. Senior officials include any director (including any non-employee director), executive officer, investor relations or public relations officer or other person with similar functions. Market participants include broker-dealers (including employees such as analysts and investment bankers), investment advisers, credit rating agencies, institutional investment managers and investment companies, including venture capital funds. Reg. FD also requires that where material non-public information has been inadvertently disclosed on a selective basis, the Company must disclose that same information to the general public promptly. Monetary penalties and other sanctions may be imposed on both the Company and its senior officials if material non-public information is either intentionally disclosed on a selective basis, or is inadvertently disclosed on a selective basis and then not subsequently disclosed publicly, where (a) at the time of disclosure the senior official either knew or was reckless in not knowing that the information was both material and non-public, or (b) after the inadvertent disclosure the senior official learns of the disclosure and knows or was reckless in not knowing that the information was both material and non-public.

Rules 10b5-1 and 10b5-2

Rules 10b5-1 and 10b5-2 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, adopted by the SEC at the same time as Reg. FD, clarify certain aspects of the general prohibition against insider trading. Rule 10b5-1 imposes liability for insider trading where a person is “aware” of material non-public information of a company when trading in the company’s securities. Rule 10b5-1 provides that trades will not result in liability for insider trading if they were made pursuant to a pre-existing plan, contract or instruction adopted while the person was not aware of material non-public information. The defense available under Rule 10b5-1 is available not only for corporate insiders, but also companies which have established share repurchase programs in compliance with the requirements of the rule. Note that these plans have recently been under increased scrutiny and must be carefully evaluated when under consideration.

Rule 10b5-2 clarifies the types of family and non-business relationships that give rise to a duty of trust or confidence, the violation of which can support a claim of insider trading. The rule provides that a duty of trust or confidence arises:

- where the person receiving information agrees to maintain the information in confidence;
- where the person receiving and the person disclosing the information have a history, pattern or practice of sharing confidences such that the person receiving the information knows or reasonably should know that there is an expectation of confidentiality; or
- where the person receives information from a spouse, parent, child or sibling unless he or she can show that, under the facts and circumstances of the relationship, no duty of trust or confidence existed.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES

In light of the risk of controlling person liability and because of the severity of the possible sanctions for insider trading and selective disclosure, the Company should consider initiating, at a minimum, the following preventive measures:

1. Limit Access to Material Non-Public Information. The Company should, to the extent possible, limit the dissemination of material non-public information to employees whose jobs require access to such information. Widespread disclosure of material non-public information to employees of the Company reduces the ability of the Company to monitor and prevent trading violations. In addition, the Company should identify all employees who routinely have access to material non-public information and communicate to these persons the significance of such information and the risks attendant to any misuse or inadvertent disclosure. To avoid inadvertent violations, the Company should review with each identified employee the types of information that may be considered material.

2. Limit the Number of Persons Authorized to Speak to Market Participants. The Company should identify the officers and other employees who are authorized to talk to market participants on behalf of the Company (“Company Spokespersons”). All other officers and employees, as well as all non-employee directors, should be instructed to refrain from such discussions, and refer all inquiries to the Company Spokespersons. If any director, officer or employee becomes aware that an unauthorized disclosure of material non-public information about the Company was made on a selective basis, he or she should immediately notify the General Counsel. The proposed Statement of Company Policy Regarding Insider Trading and Disclosure of Material Non-Public Information (the “Trading and Disclosure Policy”) attached hereto (see Attachment A) contains a provision implementing these recommendations.
3. Determine the Method of Distribution for Public Disclosures. Any intentional disclosure of material information must be reasonably designed to provide broad, non-exclusionary distribution of the information to the public. A determination of whether a method of distribution meets the requirement of broad public disclosure depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular issuer. Generally speaking, traditional methods of disclosure used by an issuer, such as press releases or conference calls that are accessible to the public, should suffice, but nonetheless a specific case-by-case determination must be made by each issuer. The SEC has recently acknowledged that websites may, under certain circumstances, be utilized for public disclosure. Filing or “furnishing” information on a Form 8-K is deemed by the SEC to be public disclosure in all cases. Solely posting the information on the Company’s website may be sufficient if the website has been established as a recognized channel of distribution.

4. Consider Adoption of a Quiet Period Policy. If the Company intends to engage in one-on-one meetings with market participants or make presentations at financial analyst conferences, the Company may want to consider establishing quarterly “Quiet Periods,” during which such activities will be curtailed. All non-public discussions about the Company’s current quarter or anticipated future performance with broker-dealers (including employees such as analysts and investment bankers), investment advisers, institutional investment managers, stockholders and investment companies (including venture capital funds) should be prohibited during the Quiet Period. Establishing and adhering to a Quiet Period policy can reduce inquiries and, as a result, reduce the risk of selective disclosure during sensitive periods. Companies with a Quiet Period policy often commence their Quiet Period near the end of each fiscal quarter, with many companies commencing the period at the start of the Quarterly Black-Out Period (discussed in paragraph 6(a) below), and ending it upon the Company’s announcement of earnings. A Quiet Period policy should be in writing and approved by the Board of Directors. The Trading and Disclosure Policy contains a provision implementing this recommendation.

5. Policy Statement. In view of the potential liability of both the employee and the Company for insider trading and selective disclosure violations, the Company should distribute a policy statement designed to emphasize the seriousness of the offenses and the severity of the possible sanctions. A proposed form of Trading and Disclosure Policy is provided as Attachment A. The policy statement should include the following:

- General discussion of the prohibition against trading in the Company’s securities while aware of material non-public information about the Company, including guidelines as to what may be considered material non-public information.

- Explanation of the liability of one who discloses confidential information to a third party who subsequently trades in the securities of the Company based on this confidential information.

- Discussion of the potential penalties, both civil and criminal, that may be imposed on a person who trades on or tips inside information and on controlling persons who fail to take steps to prevent such trading or tipping.

- Statement of Company policy regarding disclosure of material non-public information and trading by employees before and after the dissemination to the public of such information. Companies may also want to specifically address the use of social media by the Company and its employees, whether in this policy or a separate stand alone policy.
• Identification of the persons who are authorized to talk to market participants on behalf of the Company.

The Trading and Disclosure Policy includes these listed items. The Trading and Disclosure Policy should be considered by the Company’s Board of Directors and, following approval, should be distributed to all employees and directors of the Company. The Trading and Disclosure Policy should also be posted on the Company’s intranet and redistributed regularly to employees and directors. In addition, each new employee or director should receive a copy of the Trading and Disclosure Policy upon joining the Company. The Company should also consider distributing periodic reminders to employees highlighting their responsibilities and obligations with respect to confidential information.

6. Implementation. While the adoption of the Trading and Disclosure Policy will show that some steps have been taken to prevent trading violations, the Company must implement additional, proactive procedures to enforce its policies and thereby further reduce the risk of controlling person liability. Compliance is not solely a matter of individual responsibility but rather is also a matter of Company concern. The Company should establish guidelines to assist employees and affiliates in determining when they may trade in the Company’s securities upon the release of material information to the public. These guidelines and additional recommended enforcement measures are set forth below.

(a) Trading Restrictions. The prohibition against trading on material inside information applies not only to the period before such information is released to the public but also for a certain period of time after such release. An employee, director or officer of the Company may still have an unfair informational advantage if the public has not had an opportunity to fully evaluate the information. A general guideline is that no employee, director or officer should trade in the Company securities until the expiration of two full trading days after the release of material information. A longer waiting period would be appropriate if the information does not receive wide distribution or is complex in nature. These trading restrictions should also apply to the insider’s family members and any trust, partnership or other entity that he or she controls (including venture capital partnerships).

An additional measure that is typically implemented is to institute “Quarterly Black-Out Periods” for directors, officers and selected employees. During a Black-Out Period, all directors, officers and employees are required to refrain from buying or selling the Company’s securities. The foregoing prohibition does not prohibit the exercise of stock options granted under the Company’s stock plans. (Note, however, that a sale of the securities received upon exercise of an option, including sales pursuant to a so-called “cashless exercise” of a stock option through a broker, would not be permitted during this period.)

The Quarterly Black-Out Period should begin when it is likely that individuals within the company have access to financial information that has not been disseminated to the public. A typical beginning point would be around the time company personnel start to work on the company’s financial statements. This could be as many as thirty or as little as a few days before the end of the quarter. The Black-Out Period ends when the marketplace has absorbed the company’s financial information. Although two days after the release of earnings information has been standard, the Black-Out Period endpoint can range from one to three trading days after the release. A company that is large and widely followed might end its Black-Out Period one day after the release, whereas a smaller and not as widely followed company might need to wait as long as three days. Choosing when to end the Quarterly Black-Out Period requires a company-specific balancing of the need to prevent insider trading and the appearance of insider trading with the need to permit insiders to conduct necessary trades. Under the attached Trading and Disclosure Policy, the Quarterly Black-Out Period will commence at the close of business on the 15th day of the third month of each fiscal quarter and will end two full trading days after the public announcement of quarterly results.

In addition, in cases where the Company either has, or is at risk of acquiring, material non-public information, unscheduled Black-Out Periods ("Special Black-Out Periods") should be imposed. This should occur when the Company is imminently considering some significant decision, for example, a public offering of securities, an acquisition or a major commercial transaction, or expects to come into the possession of other material information, such as the results of a clinical trial or news of the progress of a significant product development initiative. At those times the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer should designate the persons who may reasonably be expected to learn of the material non-public information and who therefore will be made subject to the Special Black-Out Period. Note that the persons subject to a Special Black-Out Period need not be the same persons who are routinely subject to the Quarterly Black-Out Periods, and that in deciding which persons will be subject to a Special Black-Out Period consideration should be given to the risk that an over-inclusive list may in and of itself result in an inadvertent disclosure of the fact that something material is going on. Persons made subject to a Special Black-Out Period should receive a separate communication from the Company at both the beginning and the end of the Special Black-Out Period. The Company should not notify those persons of the reason for the Special Black-Out Period. Only those persons subject to the Special Black-Out Period should receive notice that the Period is effective. Persons subject to trading restrictions during Special Black-Out Periods who have filed a pre-existing trading program with the Company in accordance with paragraph (e) below ("Trading Program") will be allowed to continue to effect such sales and purchases, subject to the overarching right of the Company to suspend trades to the extent deemed necessary for the Company's best interests. Individuals with a pre-existing trading program that is not filed with the Company must adhere to any Special Black-Out Periods imposed on them unless they obtain the prior approval from the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer, which will be granted solely in the Company's discretion.

While Black-Out Periods may be useful prophylactic tools, the existence or non-existence of a Black-Out Period does not alter the general prohibition against trading based on material non-public information applicable to all employees and directors at all times. The general prohibition on trading based on material non-public information by persons not subject to a Quarterly Black-Out Period or a Special Black-Out Period will continue to apply even during these Periods. In addition, this general prohibition will apply to all employees and directors even when no Black-Out Period is in effect. A proposed draft of a memo explaining the Company's Black-Out Period Procedures is attached hereto as Attachment B.

An alternative, more restrictive approach that the Company may consider is to recommend that directors, officers and other employees who have access to material non-public information be permitted to trade only during designated trading windows. Specific trading windows that could be adopted might include a thirty day period commencing one week after mailing or electronically posting the annual report, and a twenty day period commencing one full trading day following release of quarterly results. The general prohibition on trading based on material non-public information would continue to apply even during these periods.
(b) Pre-Clearance Procedures. As an additional safeguard against insider trading, the Company may want to consider a requirement that all of the Company’s executive officers, directors and other employees designated in writing by the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer who routinely have access to material non-public information request pre-clearance within the Company in advance of engaging in any proposed trade in the Company’s securities. The Compliance Administrator would be aware of material non-public information that might preclude insiders from trading in the market and would also require the person proposing the trade to describe any circumstances that may have caused him or her to be in present possession of material non-public information. Based on all of this information, the Compliance Administrator would allow or prohibit the trade. This pre-clearance requirement would be integrated with similar procedures designed to prevent short swing profit violations and to ensure compliance with Section 16(a) filing requirements. It should be emphasized that pre-clearance procedures are not a substitute for individual judgment and that each person subject to the policy must individually assess whether he or she has access to material non-public information that would preclude trading. Pre-clearance of proposed trades would not be required for trades made under a Trading Program established in accordance with paragraph (f) below. The proposed Trading and Disclosure Policy requires the Company’s executive officers, directors and certain other employees designated in writing by the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer to provide pre-notice of proposed trades in the Company’s securities.

(c) Certificate of Compliance. To stress to employees the seriousness of its enforcement commitment, the Company should require all employees to sign a certification as to their understanding of the insider trading laws and their compliance with these laws and Company policy. This certification initially would take the form of an undertaking that each employee would execute after receiving and reviewing the Trading and Disclosure Policy. The Company also may want to have employees certify on an annual or other periodic basis as to their continued compliance after receiving a reminder of their continuing obligations under the Trading and Disclosure Policy. A sample certification statement is set forth in Attachment A hereto.

(d) Administration. The Company should designate a compliance administrator to oversee enforcement of the Trading and Disclosure Policy and to coordinate the distribution of information to employees. Since Section 16 filing requirements provide an effective means of monitoring trading by officers and directors, we recommend that the same person coordinate both the Section 16 compliance program and the insider trading enforcement policy.

(e) Trading under Rule 10b5-1. Paragraph (c)(1) of SEC Rule 10b5-1 explains the circumstances under which trading will not result in insider trading liability for persons on whose behalf securities are bought or sold while such persons are in the possession of material non-public information. In order to qualify for this protection, Rule 10b5-1 requires that the person be able to show that:

- before becoming aware of the material non-public information he or she entered into a binding contract to purchase or sell securities, provided instructions to another person to execute the trade, or adopted a written plan for trading securities, in each case in good faith and not as part of a plan or scheme to avoid the restrictions of Rule 10b5-1;
the contract, instructions or plan either (1) expressly specified the amount, price and date of the transaction (as such terms are defined below), (2) provided a written formula or algorithm or computer program for determining amounts, prices and dates or (3) did not permit the person to exercise any subsequent influence over how, when or whether to effect trades (assuming that any other person who did exercise such influence was not aware of any material non-public information while exercising such influence); and

- the purchase or sale was made pursuant to the pre-existing contract, instruction or plan. Note that under the Rule a purchase or sale is not pursuant to a contract, instruction or plan if the person who established such contract, instruction or plan altered or deviated from the contract, instruction or plan or entered into or altered a corresponding or hedging transaction or position with respect to the securities.

Examples of trading that fit within the protection afforded by Rule 10b5-1 include a written instruction provided to a broker specifying the amount, price and date for trading activity. The logic behind Rule 10b5-1 is simple: if a person sets in motion a trade at a time when he or she is not in possession of material non-public information, that trade may be executed even if the person later learns of such information.

In practice, however, Rule 10b5-1 is complex to apply. First, each of the requirements set forth above makes use of complex definitions:

- Amount means either a specified number of shares or a specified dollar value of securities;
- Price means market price on a particular date or a limit price or a particular dollar price;
- Date means either the specific day on which a trade is to be executed, or a day or days on which a limit order is in force.

The endorsement of limit orders creates a particularly useful mechanism to obtain liquidity and ensure a certain level of return. For example, a limit order could be adopted that prevents a scheduled purchase or sale under the Trading Program from occurring if the market price is below the pre-determined limit price.

Given the importance both of enabling transactions – especially sales – of securities by directors, officers and key employees, and at the same time minimizing the risk of liability for insider trading, we recommend that the Company take advantage of the protection granted under Rule 10b5-1, albeit with some built-in safety margins so that the shield offered by the Rule does not morph into a sword aimed at the Company. For example, while Rule 10b5-1 itself does not prohibit persons who set up a plan from modifying the plan at any time, the attached proposed policy provides that a decision to modify a plan cannot take effect for 90 days, and that plans cannot be modified more than once per quarter. The reason for these restrictions is that more frequent adjustment of plans may signal to plaintiffs’ securities lawyers, or to securities regulators, that insiders are actually attempting to structure their trades on the basis of material non-public information. The 90-day waiting period increases the likelihood that if such information is known to the trader at the time of an adjustment to the plan, it will become public, or stale, by the time the change takes effect.
Specifically, we recommend that the Company:

- Authorize directors, executive officers, and other persons designated by the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer to establish contracts, give trading instructions or establish trading plans (collectively, “Trading Programs”) in compliance with the requirements of Rule 10b5-1 and the further requirements set forth below.

- Require that each Trading Program meet the following requirements:
  - the Trading Program must be in writing, and be signed and dated by the person entering into the Trading Program;
  - a copy of the Trading Program must be filed with the designated Company officer within five (5) business days after the Trading Program is established in writing and at least one Black-Out Period prior to the first trade authorized under the Trading Program;
  - the Trading Program may not be established during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period to which the person who proposes to establish a Trading Program is subject;
  - the Trading Program must be in a form that meets the requirements of Rule 10b5-1 and must explicitly provide for the Company’s right of suspension described below; and
  - the Trading Program must be subject to the right of the Company to suspend trades to the extent the Company deems such suspension to be in the best interests of the Company, for example, where such suspension would be necessary to comply with the requests of underwriters for “lock-up” agreements in connection with an underwritten public offering of the Company’s securities.

- Require that any Trading Program filed with the Company include a certification from the person entering into the Trading Program that (a) he or she was not in possession of any material non-public information about the Company when he or she established the Trading Program, and (b) the Trading Program is entered into in good faith and not as a scheme to evade the prohibitions of Rule 10b-5.

- Require that any person who has filed a Trading Program with the Company and who is subject to Section 16 reporting indicate by footnote on any Form 4 or Form 5 filed by such person to report transactions effected under the Trading Program, as well as note on any Form 144, that such transaction was effected under a contract, instruction or plan in accordance with Rule 10b5-1.

- Require that a Trading Program established by a person cannot be suspended, expanded or otherwise modified by such person more than once each fiscal quarter.
• Require that any suspension, expansion or other modification of an existing Trading Program by the person who established the Trading Program must: (a) be in writing and signed and dated by the person who established the Trading Program; (b) be filed with the Company’s designated senior officer within five (5) business days after the suspension, expansion or other modification was reduced to writing; (c) not be made during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period; and (d) not become effective until at least one Black-Out Period after the suspension, expansion or other modification of the Trading Program was filed with the Company.

• Require that any cancellation of an existing Trading Program by the person who established the Trading Program must: (a) be in writing and signed and dated by the person who established the Trading Program; (b) be filed with the Company’s designated senior officer within five (5) business days after the cancellation is reduced to writing; and (c) not be made during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period.

• Prohibit a person establishing a Trading Program from entering into or altering a corresponding or hedging transaction that involves the shares covered by the Trading Program.

Note that directors, officers and employees will retain the ability to engage in transactions pursuant to Rule 10b5-1 outside of the requirements set forth above for Trading Programs; provided, however, such transactions will not be eligible for an exemption from any applicable Black-Out Periods unless they obtain approval in writing from the Chief Executive Officer or another designated senior officer, which will be granted solely in the Company’s discretion, prior to making such purchase or sale. Furthermore, directors, officers and employees who have established a Trading Program can also engage in transactions independent of any established Trading Program, but these transactions remain subject to the Company’s Trading and Disclosure Policy.

While Rule 10b5-1 provides that the purchase or sale of Company securities under a Trading Program will not be considered to be made on the basis of inside information for purposes of the federal securities laws, some state securities laws may not give effect to the affirmative defense under Rule 10b5-1 and may impose liability on traders who set up trading programs that effect trades while they know of material non-public information about the Company. However, most class action claims that rely on these state statutes, may no longer be brought as a result of the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998. Regardless, Company personnel who are interested in establishing a Trading Program may want to consult a securities lawyer to determine the possible applicability of these state securities laws.

CONCLUSION

The policy and suggestions outlined above, if implemented and enforced, will help serve to prevent insider trading and selective disclosure violations as well as significantly reduce the risk of liability for the Company.

Re:    Statement of Company Policy Regarding Insider Trading and Disclosure of Material Non-Public Information

Federal securities laws prohibit insiders of a public company, such as officers, directors and employees, from trading in the securities of that company on the basis of "inside" information. In addition to the direct liability of insiders for insider trading violations, potential liability on the part of companies and their directors and officers exists for failures to prevent such violations by company personnel. In light of these liabilities and the severity of possible sanctions both to you and to Xyz, Inc. (the "Company") for insider trading violations, we have adopted the policies set forth in this Statement of Company Policy.

In addition, SEC Regulation FD ("Reg. FD") generally requires that whenever a "senior official" of the Company intentionally discloses material non-public information about the Company to market participants and holders of the Company’s securities, the Company must simultaneously disclose that same information to the public. Senior officials include any director (including any non-employee director), executive officer, investor relations or public relations officer or other person with similar functions. Market participants include broker-dealers (including employees such as analysts and investment bankers), investment advisers, institutional investment managers and investment companies, including venture capital funds. Reg. FD also requires that where material non-public information has been inadvertently disclosed on a selective basis, the Company must disclose that same information to the general public promptly. Communications made in connection with most registered securities offerings are excluded from Reg. FD. Monetary penalties and other sanctions may be imposed on both the Company and its senior officials if material non-public information is either intentionally disclosed on a selective basis, or is inadvertently disclosed on a selective basis and then not subsequently disclosed publicly, where (a) at the time of disclosure the senior official either knew or was reckless in not knowing that the information was both material and non-public, or (b) after the inadvertent disclosure the senior official learns of the disclosure and knows or was reckless in not knowing that the information was both material and non-public.

Please note that while these procedures and policies are Company policy, they do not replace the primary responsibility of each employee to understand and comply with the prohibitions on insider trading and selective disclosure under the federal securities laws. If you have any questions on any of the following or with respect to your obligations under federal securities laws generally, please contact the Company’s designated Compliance Administrator, who is responsible for enforcing this Statement of Company Policy and for disseminating information regarding insider trading. The Compliance Administrator will be designated from time to time by the Company’s General Counsel. If the last designated Compliance Administrator has ceased to be employed by the Company, please contact the Company’s General Counsel with any questions.

Background

The Insider Trading and Securities Fraud Enforcement Act of 1988 (the “Insider Trading Act”), as amended by the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002, imposes severe sanctions on those who engage in insider trading. Individuals who trade on insider information or “tip” such information to others may be subject to:

- Criminal fines up to $5,000,000;
- Prison sentence of up to twenty years; and
- Civil penalties of up to three times the profit gained or loss avoided as a result of such sale, purchase or tip.

In addition to sanctions against those who directly violate the prohibition on insider trading, the Insider Trading Act in certain circumstances imposes a penalty on companies and their directors and officers for failure to take measures to prevent such violations.

Rules 10b5-1 and 10b5-2 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 clarify certain aspects of the prohibition against insider trading. Rule 10b5-1 imposes liability for insider trading where a person is “aware” of material non-public information of a company when trading in such company’s securities. This rule rejects stricter standards adopted in certain cases that supported the argument that the SEC must prove a person actually “used” the material non-public information. Rule 10b5-1 provides, however, that a person will not be liable for insider trading even if the trade occurs while that person is aware of material non-public information if the trade was pursuant to a pre-existing plan, contract or instruction adopted while the person did not possess material non-public information.

Rule 10b5-2 clarifies the types of family and non-business relationships that give rise to a duty of trust or confidence, the violation of which can support a claim of insider trading. The rule provides that a duty of trust or confidence arises:

- where the person receiving information agrees to maintain the information in confidence;
- where the person receiving and the person disclosing the information have a history, pattern or practice of sharing confidences such that the person receiving information knows or reasonably should know that there is an expectation of confidentiality; or
- where the person receives information from a spouse, parent, child or sibling unless he or she can show that, under the facts and circumstances of the relationship, no duty of trust or confidence existed.
Company Policy

In light of the severity of possible sanctions to employees and the Company for insider trading and the Company’s obligation to insure that all material non-public information disclosed to market participants is disclosed publicly, we have adopted the following procedures and policies. Since you will be asked to certify as to your understanding and intention to comply, as well as to your actual compliance with this policy statement, you should read this statement carefully and call the Company’s Compliance Administrator if you have any questions.

Persons Subject to the Policy

This Policy applies to all officers, employees, and directors of the Company or its subsidiaries. As described herein, it also applies to the family members of those employees, officers, or directors, as well as any entities that any employee, officer, or director controls or any person with whom the employee, officer, or director has a confidential relationship. In addition, the Company may determine that other persons who have access to material non-public information, such as consultants or contractors, are subject to this Policy.

Restrictions

No director, officer or employee of the Company (or any other person subject to this Policy) may, directly, or indirectly through other entities or persons, including family members:

- buy or sell securities of the Company when aware of material non-public information about the Company, except as otherwise specified in this Policy;
- engage in any other action to take advantage of material non-public information about the Company or pass that information on to others except where authorized by this Policy;
- disclose material non-public information to any broker-dealer (including any employee such as an analyst or investment banker), investment adviser, institutional investment manager or investment company (including venture capital funds), media or shareholder, or in any social media (e.g., Facebook, Twitter, etc.), except as authorized by this policy;
- discuss or disclose non-public information about the Company or its activities that may have an impact on the value of the Company’s stock, except when clearly authorized in connection with the Company’s business;
- engage in the following transactions with respect to securities of the Company: (1) selling short; (2) buying or selling publicly traded options, including puts, calls, or other derivative securities; (3) buying on margin; (4) pledging securities as loan collateral; (5) short-term trading, meaning selling company securities in the open market within six months of purchasing company securities of the same class; (6) standing and limit orders except those under an approved 10b5-1 Trading Program or those that are of short duration and compliant with any Quarterly or Special Black-Out Periods; or (7) any hedging arrangement [Editors’ Note: as an alternative to a blanket prohibition on pledging securities, a policy could allow a person to pledge if he or she shows clear ability to repay the loan. In this case, the policy should specify] that individuals who want to be included in this exception need to submit a request to the Compliance Administrator a minimum of two weeks prior to the transaction.]

- participate in any investment club that could invest in the company’s securities while the person subject to this Policy is in possession of material non-public information;

- engage in any transaction of Company securities without receiving pre-clearance from the Compliance Administrator, if subject to the pre-clearance procedures described herein;

- buy or sell Company securities during the “Quarterly Black-Out Period,” as described herein, if subject to the Quarterly Black-Out Period and unless otherwise authorized by this Policy;

- buy or sell Company securities during a “Special Black-Out Period,” as described herein, if subject to a Special Black-Out Period and unless otherwise authorized by this Policy;

- buy or sell securities of another publicly-traded company, including the Company’s customers or suppliers, while in possession of material non-public information about that company obtained in the course of working for the Company;

- disclose material non-public information about another publicly-traded company, including the Company’s customers or suppliers, obtained in the course of working for the Company unless clearly authorized to do so in connection with the Company’s business.

Due to the risk of inadvertent disclosure of material non-public information, no member of the Board of Directors, officer or employee shall engage in online discussions concerning the Company in Internet chat rooms, message boards or other Internet sites (whether or not such sites specifically relate to the Company). In addition, the Company strongly discourages employees from participating in such forums relating to competitors of the Company or entities with which the Company has a significant business relationship.

The Company has authorized the Chief Executive Officer, President, Vice President of Finance and General Counsel and certain other employees designated by them in writing (the “Company Spokespersons”) to speak on behalf of the Company with any broker-dealer (including any employee such as an analyst or investment banker), investment advisor, institutional investment manager or investment company (including venture capital funds), media, social media or shareholder. Requests for information about the Company should in all cases be directed promptly to a Company Spokesperson.
Permitted Transactions

Transactions under Rule 10b5-1 Trading Programs

Rule 10b5-1 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 provides a defense from insider trading liability if trades occur pursuant to a pre-arranged “trading plan” that meets specified conditions. Under this rule, if you enter into a binding contract, written plan or instruction that specifies the amount and price of, and the date on which, Company securities are to be purchased or sold, and these arrangements are established at a time when you are not aware of material, non-public information, then you may claim a defense to insider trading liability even if the transactions under the Trading Program occur at a time when you have subsequently learned material, non-public information. Trading Programs under the rule must specify the amount, price and date through a formula or must specify trading parameters that another person has discretion to administer, but you must not exercise any subsequent discretion affecting the transactions under the pre-arranged Trading Program. If your broker or any other person exercises discretion in implementing the trades, you must not influence his or her actions and he or she must not possess any material, non-public information at the time of the trades. Trading Programs can be established for a single trade or a series of trades, and can only be amended at times when you are not aware of material, non-public information.

It is important that you properly document the details of any Trading Program. In addition to the requirements for Trading Programs described above, there are a number of additional procedural conditions under Rule 10b5-1(c) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 that must be satisfied before you can rely on the Rule 10b5-1 trading plan exemption. Any directors, executive officers or senior management officers of the Company who wish to enter into a Trading Program involving Company securities must pre-clear the plan with the Company’s [Chief Financial Officer]. Under Company policy:

- the Trading Program must be in writing, and be signed and dated by the person entering into the Trading Program;
- a copy of the Trading Program must be filed with the [Chief Financial Officer] within five (5) business days after the Trading Program is established in writing and at least one Black-Out Period prior to the first trade authorized under the Trading Program;
- the Trading Program may not be established during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period to which the person who proposes to establish a Trading Program is subject;
- the Trading Program must be in a form that meets the requirements of Rule 10b5-1 and must explicitly provide for the Company’s right of suspension described below;
- the Trading Program must be subject to the right of the Company to suspend trades to the extent the Company deems such suspension to be in the best interests of the Company, for example, where such suspension would be necessary to comply with the requests of underwriters for “lock-up” agreements in connection with an underwritten public offering of the Company’s securities;
- any Trading Program filed with the Company must include a certification from the person entering into the Trading Program that (a) he or she was not in possession of...
any material non-public information about the Company when he or she established the Trading Program, and (b) the Trading Program is entered into in good faith and not as a scheme to evade the prohibitions of Rule 10b-5;

- any person who has filed a Trading Program with the Company and who is subject to Section 16 reporting must indicate by footnote on any Form 4 or Form 5 filed by such person to report transactions effected under the Trading Program, as well as note on any Form 144, that such transaction was effected under a contract, instruction or plan in accordance with Rule 10b5-1;

- a Trading Program established by a person cannot be suspended, expanded or otherwise modified by such person more than once each fiscal quarter;

- any suspension, expansion or other modification of an existing Trading Program by the person who established the Trading Program must: (a) be in writing and signed and dated by the person who established the Trading Program; (b) be filed with the Company’s designated senior officer within five (5) business days after the suspension, expansion or other modification was reduced to writing; (c) not be made during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period; and (d) not become effective until at least one Black-Out Period after the suspension, expansion or other modification of the Trading Program was filed with the Company;

- any cancellation of an existing Trading Program by the person who established the Trading Program must: (a) be in writing and signed and dated by the person who established the Trading Program; (b) be filed with the Company’s designated senior officer within five (5) business days after the cancellation is reduced to writing; and (c) not be made during any Quarterly Black-Out Period or any Special Black-Out Period; and

- a person establishing a Trading Program may not enter into or alter a corresponding or hedging transaction that involves the shares covered by the Trading Program.

Gifts

Gifts of Company securities are not subject to this Policy unless the donor has reason to believe that the donee will sell the securities while the donor possesses material non-public information or is subject to a Quarterly or Special Black-Out Period.

Transactions under Company Plans

This Policy does not apply to purchase of Company securities from the Company or sale of Company securities to the Company. Except where specifically stated, the following transactions are not subject to this Policy.

- Stock Option Exercises. This Policy does not apply to the exercise of employee stock options acquired under a Company plan or to a person’s election to direct the Company to withhold shares that are subject to an option in order to meet tax withholding requirements. This Policy does apply to the cashless broker-assisted sale of stock and to other market sales designed to generate cash to satisfy an option’s exercise price.
Restricted Stock Awards. This Policy is inapplicable to the vesting of restricted stock or an election to have the Company withhold shares to fulfill tax withholding requirements when the stock vests.

401(k) Plans. This Policy does not apply to purchases of Company securities in a 401(k) plan via a payroll deduction but does apply to certain 401(k) elections, including: (1) an election to change the percentage of periodic contributions allocated to the Company's stock fund; (2) an election to borrow against the 401(k) account if the loan will cause the liquidation of any portion of a Company stock fund balance; (3) an election to pre-pay a loan if pre-payment will cause loan proceeds to be allocated to the Company stock fund; and (4) an election to make an intra-plan transfer of an account balance to or from the Company stock fund.

Employee Stock Purchase Plan. This Policy is inapplicable to any purchase of Company securities occurring as a result of an election made upon enrollment in the plan to periodically contribute to the plan. This Policy is also inapplicable to purchases of Company securities that resulted from lump sum plan contributions where the plan-holder elected to participate in the plan via lump sum payments at the start of the relevant enrollment period. This Policy is applicable to an election to participate in the plan during an enrollment period and to sale of Company securities purchased under the plan.

Dividend Reinvestment Plan. This Policy does not apply to purchase of Company securities pursuant to a dividend reinvestment plan and occurring as a result of the plan-holder's reinvestment of dividends from Company securities. This Policy does apply to: voluntary purchases of Company securities arising from additional contributions to the dividend reinvestment plan; an election to participate in a plan or increase participation in a plan; and sale of Company securities purchased under the plan.

Applicability of Restrictions:

Material Information. Information is "material" when it is substantially likely that a reasonable investor would consider the information important to a decision to buy, hold or sell stock and would therefore affect the price of the stock. Examples of material information include:

- projections of future earnings or losses;
- knowledge regarding a pending or proposed merger, acquisition or tender offer or regarding a significant purchase or sale of assets;
- changes in dividend policies;
- the declaration of a stock split or the offering of additional securities;
- changes in management;
- cybersecurity breaches;
- breakthroughs in technology; and
- the award or loss of a substantial contract or gain or loss of substantial customer or supplier.
Either positive or negative information may be material. If you are unsure at any time as to whether you are in possession of material information about the Company, you should contact the Compliance Administrator for clarification. The prohibition on selective disclosure of material non-public information during conversations with market participants applies to all directors (including outside directors), officers and employees.

Non-Public Information. The restrictions on purchases or sales of Company securities based on material information applies not only to non-public information but also applies for a limited time after such information has been released to the public. The Company’s stockholders and the investing public must be afforded time to receive and digest material information, before it can be considered in the public domain. As a general rule, you should consider material information to be non-public from the time you become aware of material information until two full trading days after it has been released by the Company to the public and, accordingly, you should not engage in any stock transactions until after that time. If the information is complex or is not widely disseminated, the Company will advise you in certain circumstances that you must wait an even longer period of time.

Family Members and Other Third Parties. The restrictions on trading set forth above apply not only to you but also to family members, such as your spouse, children, parents and siblings as well as other persons with whom you have a reasonable expectation of confidentiality. You are responsible for the compliance of family members and other persons with whom you have a confidential relationship and should, if necessary, review with them the Company policy and the general prohibitions on insider trading. In order to minimize the potential for exposure, you should avoid discussing any non-public information about the Company with family members. The restrictions on purchases or sales of Company securities also apply to any trust, partnership or other entity which you control including venture capital partnerships.

Tipping Information to Others. You may not disclose any material non-public information to your friends, your social acquaintances or anyone else. This prohibition applies whether or not you receive any benefit from the other person’s use of that information.

Obligations Post-Employment, etc. Following the cessation of your business relationship with the Company, the insider trading laws continue to prohibit any trading by you while in possession of material inside information. As a result, you should consult with your counsel prior to any sale of Company securities after your business relationship with the Company terminates, particularly during any Black-Out Period immediately following the cessation of your business relationship with the Company.

Procedures:

All employees shall execute the attached certification regarding compliance with the policies and procedures set forth in this policy statement and with the prohibition against insider trading and selective disclosure.

On a periodic basis, all members of the Board of Directors, officers and employees may be requested to certify their compliance with the policies and procedures set forth in this policy statement and with the prohibition on insider trading and, with respect to directors and officers, compliance with the policies and procedures set forth in this policy statement regarding public disclosure of material non-public information.
No director, officer or employee shall disclose or discuss any non-public information about the Company with any person outside the Company, except as may be required in connection with the proper performance by such director, officer or employee of his or her duties on behalf of the Company. Only Company Spokespersons are authorized to have substantive discussions about any aspect of the Company’s business with the media or any broker-dealer, investment banker, securities analyst, investment advisor, institutional investment manager or investment company, venture capital fund, or stockholder, or in any social media (e.g., Facebook, Twitter, etc.).

If any director, officer or employee becomes aware that an unauthorized disclosure of material non-public information about the Company was made on a selective basis, he or she should immediately notify the Chief Executive Officer or his designee.

The Company has adopted a Quiet Period during which Company Spokespersons may not discuss the Company’s current quarter or anticipated future performance with broker-dealers (including employees such as analysts and investment bankers), investment advisers, institutional investment managers, stockholders and investment companies, including venture capital funds. This Quiet Period starts on the 15th day of the last month of each quarter and ends two full trading days after the Company makes its quarterly earnings announcement.

Internet Chat Rooms; Social Media. A number of questions have arisen concerning the propriety of employees engaging in online discussions in Internet chat rooms, social media websites or other Internet sites concerning the Company. It is virtually impossible to engage in such discussions without divulging some information that is proprietary to the Company and which is not generally known, regardless of the participant’s intent. These forums are often filled with inaccuracies, and good-intentioned attempts to “correct the record” can result in more harm than good. Readers of this type of information can use such information, which can be “material,” in inappropriate ways over which neither the participant nor the Company has control. We all need to be vigilant to ensure that no material or confidential information (especially earnings related information) “leaks” to the public before the Company officially releases it.

Further, it is a common misperception that the identity of participants on Internet discussion forums is secret. Government agencies and individuals can obtain this information under certain circumstances, and thus there is no real “anonymity” on the Internet. Consequently, it is important for all employees to understand that the Company’s policy covers all communications by employees, including participation in Internet or other forums or chat rooms. As such, communications relating to the Company on Internet chat rooms, social media, bulletin boards, or otherwise are prohibited. [Editors’ Note: consider whether some use of Company information on social media will be permitted.] In addition, the Company strongly discourages and, depending on the information, may prohibit employees from participating in such forums relating to competitors of the Company or entities with which the Company has a business relationship.

No Comment Policy. The Company has a general policy that it will not comment on rumors concerning Company developments, including, without limitation, rumors concerning offerings of its securities, or acquisitions or dispositions, restructurings or similar matters except as approved by a Company Spokesperson (or a designee of such Company Spokesperson).
Means For Public Disclosure. The Company will disclose material information by a means of dissemination designed to provide broad, non-exclusionary distribution of the information to the public.

Company Spokespersons. The Company designates the [Chief Executive Officer, the President and Chief Operating Officer, the Vice President of Finance and the General Counsel] and those persons whom they designate in writing to be the Company Spokespersons authorized to speak to securities analysts, institutional investors, the press, or others, on behalf of the Company.

Pre-Clearance Procedures. Directors, officers, and employees who have been notified in writing by the Chief Executive Officer or his designee that they routinely come into possession of material non-public information are required to request pre-clearance from the Company’s Compliance Administrator for any prospective transaction in Company securities.

The request must be in writing and delivered to the Compliance Administrator a minimum of two business days prior to the proposed transaction. The requestor should consider carefully whether he or she may possess material non-public information and fully describe any circumstances surrounding possible knowledge of such information to the Compliance Administrator. The requestor should also be prepared to report the transaction on a Form 4 or Form 5, if required, and to file a Form 144 if necessary. The Compliance Administrator is not obligated to approve a proposed trade and may decide not to allow the transaction.

If a person’s proposed transaction is denied, the person should not engage in any other purchase or sale of Company securities and should not notify anyone of the denial.

If approved, a proposed transaction must be completed within five business days of approval. If not completed within that timeframe, the person seeking to make the transaction must re-request pre-clearance.

Transactions in Company securities made under a Rule 10b5-1 Trading Program are exempt from the pre-clearance requirement, subject to the conditions described above.

Quarterly Black-Out Periods. The Compliance Officer shall designate certain directors, officers, and employees of the Company or its subsidiaries as subject to this restriction. Those persons, the entities they control, and individuals with whom they have a confidential relationship, including family members, may not buy or sell Company securities during the Quarterly Black-Out Period unless otherwise permitted by this Policy. The Quarterly Black-Out Period shall begin on the fifteenth day of the third month of each of the Company’s fiscal quarters and ending two full trading days after the public announcement of the Company’s quarterly results. Trades effected pursuant to a 10b5-1 Trading Program are permitted during Black-Out Periods unless the Company has exercised its right to suspend a trade under the Trading Program as deemed necessary for the Company’s best interests.

Special Black-Out Periods. From time to time, the Compliance Administrator shall designate certain directors, officers, or employees of the Company or its subsidiaries who are aware of a material non-public event as subject to a Special Black-Out Period. Promptly after deciding to subject a person to a Special Black-Out Period, the Compliance Administrator shall notify that person that he or she is not permitted to trade in the Company’s securities and notify the person again when the Period has ended. The Compliance Administrator will not disclose the reason for the Special Black-Out Period to anyone or notify any persons but those subject to the Black-Out Period that it is in effect. A person subject to the Black-Out Period should not inform anyone of the Period. The purchase or sale of Company securities made under a Trading Program meeting the requirements set forth above is exempt from this restriction unless the Company has exercised its right to suspend a trade under the Trading Program as deemed necessary for the Company’s best interests. The purchase or sale of Company securities made under a trading program that does not meet the requirements set forth above must adhere to any Special Black-Out Periods unless the person who established the trading program obtained approval in writing from the Chief Executive Officer prior to making such purchase or sale. Approval will be granted solely in the Company’s discretion.

Conclusion

This statement is intended to present the Company’s procedures and policies with respect to the trading of securities by employees, officers and directors and the disclosure of material non-public information to market participants. The procedures and policies set forth in this policy statement present only a general framework within which you may purchase and sell securities of the Company without violating the insider trading laws. You have the ultimate responsibility for complying with the insider trading laws. Your obligations under the insider trading laws may extend beyond the procedures and policies set forth herein, and you should obtain additional guidance whenever possible.

SUBJECT:  Black-Out Period Procedures

Xyz, Inc. (the “Company”) has developed “Black-Out Period” restrictions on trading in the Company’s securities. Because of your current position with the Company, you are subject to the Company’s Black-Out Periods. This memorandum explains the Company’s Black-Out Period procedures.

The Black-Out Period

Due to the potential impact of the release of financial information at the end of each fiscal quarter on the price of the Company’s securities, officers, directors and employees of the Company with access to sensitive financial information who also trade near the end of a fiscal quarter are at significant risk of being sued for allegedly trading on inside information. To provide a measure of protection, the Company has instituted what it refers to as the “Black-Out Periods.”

The standard Black-Out Period (the “Quarterly Black-Out Period”) will commence the close of business [●] days before the end of each quarter and will end at the close of business two full trading days after the public announcement of earnings for the quarter. In addition, in cases where the Company either has, or is at risk of acquiring, material non-public information, unscheduled Black-Out Periods (“Special Black-Out Periods”) may be imposed. Usually this will occur when the Company is imminently considering some significant decision, for example, a public offering of securities, an acquisition or a major commercial transaction, or other material event. At those times, you will receive a separate communication advising you of the commencement of a special Black-Out Period or extension of a regular Quarterly Black-Out Period. Please note, however, that whether or not a Quarterly Black-Out Period or Special Black-Out Period is in effect, you are obligated to refrain from trading while in the possession of material non-public information about the Company.

During a Black-Out Period you are required to refrain from buying or selling the Company’s securities. The foregoing prohibition does not include the exercise of stock options granted under the Company’s stock plans. (Please note, however, that a same day “cashless exercise” of stock options through a broker is considered a sale of stock for this purpose, and is prohibited during a Black-Out Period.) While trading is prohibited during Black-Out Periods, trades effected pursuant to a Trading Program filed with the Company, which are described in the Company’s Statement of Company Policy Regarding Insider Trading and Disclosure (the “Trading and Disclosure Policy”), are permitted during Black-Out Periods (unless the Company has otherwise exercised its right to suspend a trade under the Trading Program as deemed necessary for the best interests of the Company). Trades effected pursuant to a trading program that otherwise meets the requirements of Rule 10b5-1 are not permitted during Quarterly or Special Black-Out Periods, but may be exempted from Special Black-Out Periods if approval in writing is granted by Chief Executive Officer or his designee, which will be granted solely in the Company’s discretion, prior to making such purchase or sale.
Material Information

Black-Out Periods are activated during periods when sensitive information may be available within the Company. It should be kept in mind, however, that an employee may possess material information other than financial information. As stated in the Company’s Trading and Disclosure Policy, information is material when there is a substantial likelihood that a reasonable investor would consider it important in making an investment decision. Thus, the fact that an important contract is about to be announced could constitute material information. Similarly, information relating to an imminent action by a regulatory agency, or an unusually significant lawsuit about to be filed, could be material information. All employees must use their common sense judgment in determining what is considered material information. If you have any questions regarding what is “material,” or the application of any of the rules described in this policy, please see me.

The Company’s Trading and Disclosure Policy addresses the subjects of insider trading and maintaining the confidentiality of corporate information. The Company has developed means for publicly announcing information. Employees who are not authorized to speak on behalf of the Company may not disclose confidential or material information about the Company. An employee who discloses material non-public information about the Company to another person who then engages in stock market transactions may be liable for having “tipped” the other person. Therefore, considerable caution must be exercised when discussing the Company with others.

Beneficial Ownership

The legal prohibitions against insider trading apply to securities held by you, as well as securities beneficially held by you. In other words, depending on the circumstances, ownership of shares held by family members, trusts or family partnerships may be attributable to you. Accordingly, if your spouse, child or other person living in your home, or if a trust of which you were trustee or beneficiary, were to buy or sell the Company’s stock during a Black-Out Period, the transaction might be deemed a purchase or sale by you. The Black-Out Period restrictions apply not only to stock transactions by you, but also to transactions by your spouse, minor children, other persons living in your home or your dependents, and any other person or entity who holds shares over which you do or may have some control.

If you have any questions about the Company’s Black-Out Period procedures, please feel free to call me.
Nasdaq Independent Director Criteria

"Independent director" means a person other than an executive officer or employee of the company [includes parents or subsidiaries] or any other individual having a relationship which, in the opinion of the company's board of directors, would interfere with the exercise of independent judgment in carrying out the responsibilities of a director. The following persons shall not be considered independent:

(A) a director who is, or at any time during the past three years was, employed by the company;

(B) a director who accepted or who has a Family Member who accepted any compensation [which can include indirect compensation such as consulting or personal service contracts or political contributions] from the company or any parent or subsidiary of the company in excess of $120,000 during any period of twelve consecutive months within the three years preceding the determination of independence, other than the following:

(i) compensation for board or board committee service;

(ii) compensation paid to a Family Member who is an employee (other than an executive officer) of the company; or

(iii) benefits under a tax-qualified retirement plan, or non-discretionary compensation.

Provided, however, that in addition to the requirements contained in this paragraph (B), audit committee members are also subject to additional, more stringent requirements under Rule 5605(c)(2) [i.e., not accept any consulting, advisory or other compensation from the issuer or be an "affiliated person" of the issuer or any subsidiary thereof].

(C) a director who is a Family Member of an individual who is, or at any time during the past three years was, employed by the company as an executive officer;

(D) a director who is, or has a Family Member who is, a partner in, or a controlling stockholder or an executive officer of, any organization to which the company made, or from which the company received, payments for property or services in the current or any of the past three fiscal years that exceed 5% of the recipient's consolidated gross revenues for that year, or $200,000, whichever is more, other than the following:

(i) payments arising solely from investments in the company's securities; or

(ii) payments under non-discretionary charitable contribution matching programs.

(E) a director of the company who is, or has a Family Member who is, employed as an executive officer of another entity where at any time during the past three years any of the executive officers of the company serve on the compensation committee of such other entity; or
(F) a director who is, or has a Family Member who is, a current partner of the company's outside auditor, or was a partner or employee of the company's outside auditor who worked on the company's audit at any time during any of the past three years.

NOTE: "Family Member" means a person's spouse, parents, children and siblings, whether by blood, marriage or adoption, or anyone residing in such person's home.
